Demand for legal marijuana in Illinois would far exceed licensed growers' ability to supply it, study shows

Legal recreational marijuana in Illinois could drive demand as high as 550,000 pounds a year, far more than the state's licensed growers can supply, according to a new study commissioned by state legislators. The possibility of full marijuana legalization has stirred up a robust lobbying effort from many of the state's 16 licensed growers, who have said that absent proof to the contrary, they believe they are capable of meeting demand. Listed below is a short file update on the 2019 Spring Session of the 101st General Assembly. If you would like additional information on any legislation in this report, please click on the bill number and it will take you to the General Assembly's website where you can find the full text, bill history and other data. Please review the list and let me know if you have any questions or concerns.

Both chambers were in session this week and are scheduled to return on Tuesday, March 12<sup>h</sup>. The focus will continue to be on committee action for the next few weeks. Please note that March 22nd is the deadline to report substantive legislation from Senate Committees and March 29th is the deadline to report substantive legislation from House Committees. The committee schedule for next week is attached.

The Commission on Government Forecasting and Accountability (COGFA) said Tuesday they expect the state to fall about $184 million short of the revenue needed to pay for this year's state budget. At the same time, they warned the state's economy will likely see a slowdown in 2020 which could exacerbate the state's financial problems. The bi-partisan commission said it now believes the state will collect about $38.3 billion in revenue by the end of FY19. However, the current state budget assumed the state would collect $38.5 billion. State income tax collections are projected to end the year $450 million higher than expected and sales taxes are doing slightly better than expected. However, the state never sold the James R. Thompson Center which was projected to generate $300 million for state coffers, and the state didn't borrow money from special state funds which was authorized in the budget. For next year, COGFA is predicting increases in both income and sales taxes, although the amount of growth isn't expected to be as strong as it has been. However, some other taxes, like inheritance and insurance taxes, are expected to drop slightly.

On Thursday Governor Pritzker announced his proposed changes to the Illinois income tax structure. A copy of the proposal is attached. According to the proposal, the Fair Income Tax elements include:

- Filers at or below $250,000 – 97% of taxpayers – will have lower tax bill
- 20% increase in current Property Tax Credit
  - From approx. $500 million (@ 5.0%) to $600 million (@ 6.0%)
- Top rate of 7.95% for net income over $1.0 million
  - Once income reaches $1.0 million, entire income is taxed at 7.95% rate
  - Corporate Income Tax rate to match top Fair Income Tax rate (7.95%)
- $100 per child Child Tax Credit for:
  - Single filers under $80K (phase-out starting @ $40K)
  - Joint filers under $100K (phase-out starting @ $60K)

For single and joint filers, the rate would be 4.75% for net income between $0 and $10,000; 4.90% between $10,001 and $100,000; 4.95% between $100,001 and $250,000; 7.75% between $250,001 and $500,000; 7.85% between $500,001 and $1,000,000; and 7.95% over $1,000,001. The current personal income tax rate is 4.95% and state's current corporate income tax rate is 7%. This proposal would raise that rate to 7.95%.

Mayors from various regions of the state joined the Illinois Municipal League (IML) to call for innovative solutions to the most pressing challenges facing local government today. The 2019 "Moving Cities Forward" legislative platform is intended to provide for the long-term success of local cities, villages and towns. The package include measures to reform and consolidate public safety pensions, protect local revenue and urge lawmakers to pass a statewide capital bill that invests in municipal infrastructure. "These proposals provide important reforms that are crucial for communities across the state to remain fiscally solvent," said Brad Cole, IML executive director. "Making these necessary reforms will help lower the tax burden for residents while allowing municipalities to better fund important services such as infrastructure investments and repairs as well as providing critical public safety services." Of all the issues facing municipalities, addressing the long-term public safety pension costs by reforming and consolidating the state's more than 650 local police and firefighter pension funds is a top priority. IML has introduced seven proposals to address this issue by creating more efficiency and greater opportunities for returns on investments for retirees.

A bill levying a statewide 7-cent tax on plastic and paper bags was reported from the Senate Revenue Committee on Wednesday. SB 1240 (Senator Link) was approved on a vote of 7-0-0. Senator Link said the bill would be amended in the coming weeks after negotiations with Governor Pritzker's office. In its current form, 2-cents of the tax would go to the retailer to cover the cost of implementing the tax, 2-cents would go to the state's General Revenue Fund and 3-cents would go to the Checkout Bag Tax Fund, which would fund solid waste management programs in the county in which it was collected. Pritzker's FY20 budget proposal includes $20 million in anticipated revenue from imposition of such a tax. The bill currently excludes the City of Chicago and any other municipalities that had a bag tax on the books as of February 1, 2018.

Senator Hastings is proposing legislation that would tighten gun ownership laws in Illinois and require law enforcement officers to confiscate weapons and ammunition from people who have had their firearms permits revoked. He said the bill is a response to the mass shooting in Aurora where five people were killed by a man whose firearm owner's identification, or FOID, card had been revoked because of a prior felony conviction. Amendment 1 to SB 44 would require the Illinois State Police to confiscate firearms and ammunition from any person whose FOID card has been revoked. It would also require State Police to report that person's name to the National Instant Criminal Background Check System. The proposal would also add several new categories of people who would be barred from owning guns in Illinois, including people who have outstanding felony warrants anywhere in the US, people who are subject to a protection from abuse order, people who have been dishonorably discharged from the military and anyone who is a fugitive from justice. It would additionally impose stricter reporting requirements on local governments and prosecutors to report to the state police the names and other identifying information of anyone who has been convicted of a crime or judged to have a mental condition that would disqualify them from owning firearms so the state police could forward that information to the national criminal background database.

FAIR TAX FOR ILLINOIS

ILLINOIS' DIRE FISCAL CONDITION

Illinois is in precarious fiscal condition, and the state's financial challenges are having a destabilizing effect on our economy, businesses, jobs and the future of working families.

- Multi-billion dollar structural deficit
- $15 billion in debt associated with unpaid bills
- Late Payment Interest Penalties exceed $1.25 billion from impasse
- Public safety, schools and social services were hollowed out
- Tens of millions in spending for court orders and consent decrees

BASIC OPTIONS FOR ADDRESSING FISCAL CHALLENGES

Option 1: Across the Board Cuts

Illinois would cut its discretionary spending by 15 percent. Discretionary spending includes:

- K-12 education
- Universities and community colleges
- State Police
- Social service agencies

Option 2: Flat Tax Increase

Illinois would raise the flat tax rate from 4.95 percent to 5.95 percent – meaning that every family in the state would pay higher taxes.

For example, a single mom making $61,000 would pay an additional $521 in taxes.

Option 3: Fair Income Tax

Illinois would change its system so the wealthy pay more, like in 33 other states. 97 percent of taxpayers would have a lower tax bill, while those making more than $250,000 would pay more and generate $3.4 billion in additional revenue.

The same single mom would pay $271 less, a difference of $792 compared to Option 2.

FAIR INCOME TAX PROVIDES TAX RELIEF FOR 97 PERCENT OF TAXPAYERS

Statewide Impact of Fair Tax

FAIR INCOME TAX ELEMENTS

- Filers at or below $250,000 – 97% of taxpayers – will have lower tax bill
  - See examples on next page
- 20% increase in current Property Tax Credit
  - From approx. $500 million (@ 5.0%) to $600 million (@ 6.0%)
- Top rate of 7.95% for net income over $1.0 million
  - Once income reaches $1.0 million, entire income is taxed at 7.95% rate
  - Corporate Income Tax rate to match top Fair Income Tax rate (7.95%)
- $100 per child Child Tax Credit for:
  - Single filers under $80K (phase-out starting @ $40K)
  - Joint filers under $100K (phase-out starting @ $60K)

FAIR INCOME TAX EXAMPLES – MID & LOW INCOME

97 percent of taxpayers get tax relief.

Assumptions: Illinois base income is prior to state exemptions and deductions. Income tax relief is the savings after changing the rate structure. Property tax credit is a 20 percent increase on top of the existing property tax credit. Child tax credit fades out as family income increases so lower-income people get the most benefit, with a total phase out at $80,000 for single parents and $100,000 for married couples.

THURSDAY, March 14, 2019
POT; CAPITAL; PRITZKER

MOVEMENT A cannabis working group will meet for the first time today with the governor's staff in an attempt to forge agreement on a marijuana legalization bill.

Longtime legislative backers of legalization have finally put together language that will be brought to the meeting today. Proponents have been waiting for input from the governor's office and that's much of what today's first meeting is supposed to be about.

By the looks of things, this issue could finally start moving forward soon. The overall concept has broad bipartisan support, but finalizing something this complicated is never an easy task. Just getting it into bill form is a win of sorts. The thing is as thick as a phonebook.

Meanwhile, video gaming talks have also finally begun. And the Pritzker administration hopes to get infrastructure talks off the ground in the coming few days.

The capital bill is a bit of a problem because as I told you yesterday Local 150 of the Operating Engineers seems intent on introducing its own proposal as early as this week. That proposal would cover "horizontal" projects like roads, bridges and transit, but not "vertical" projects like school construction. It will also likely include a funding source.

Local 150 had been talking about moving forward with its own infrastructure plan during the lame duck session in January, but held off for various reasons, including out of deference to the incoming governor.

The union claims it will have a diversity component in its legislation, but whether that'll be enough to satisfy the governor's office is still in question. Minority legislators have long complained about the lack of diversity in the road construction industry. With billions of dollars at stake and a governor who has promised to make racial and gender inclusion a top priority, the capital plan is an ideal vehicle to make things happen.

Right now, though, there appears to be some real tension between Local 150 and the governor's office. The union has some powerful allies, including House Speaker Michael Madigan (who reportedly intervened to make sure that 150's president Jim Sweeny was appointed to the Tollway board when the governor's people wanted a minority appointee), so stay tuned.

INSIGHT Gov. JB Pritzker was in New York City earlier this week to talk with the bond houses and investors. The talks with the credit rating agencies were private, but the governor's office has posted raw audio of the investors meeting online. It provides insight into not only how the visit went, but also what's going through the governor's mind right now, or, at least, whatever he wants us to know.

I had talked with one investor days before the meeting who didn't have very high hopes. He'd claimed at the time that Pritzker's proposed budget, like those of his predecessors, made it appear that the governor is "not serious about the financial situation."

The investor was mainly concerned about Pritzker's pension plan, which defers close to $900 million a year in payments and doesn't attempt to "front-load" the pension systems in order to finally bring some stability to the state's fiscal condition. Various plans have been floated to inject money up-front, including a $2 billion a year plan recently proposed by the Civic Committee of the Commercial Club of Chicago.

After the meeting, however, the investor changed his tune a bit. He was clearly impressed with the governor, who is pretty well-known for being an approachable type.

The governor was "generally received well" by the 40 or so people in the room and others who'd called in, the investor said. "He has a good presence." Pritzker, the investor said, got props just for showing up. All of his recent predecessors had sent their budget teams to meetings like this instead of attending themselves.

Pritzker made a joke about the reputation of his immediate predecessor during his answer to the very first question on Monday. The questioner thanked the governor "for inviting us." Pritzker started to answer her question and then quickly interrupted himself. "By the way, did you say thanks for fighting us? You've got the wrong governor."

The governor detailed some of his outreach to legislators on both sides of the aisle, including what he said were weekly cocktail parties with members (although I'm told yesterday's meeting with Republicans about his tax plan didn't go terribly well because the administration's briefers appeared inadequately prepared).

Pritzker also stressed his willingness to be flexible. "I'm open to good ideas," he told the investors. "I'm not an ideologue, I'm not somebody who's stuck in cement about everything, and in particular, about solving the problems of the state. We're all going to be creative and we're all going to have to be a little bit flexible on both sides of the aisle."

But, he said he hasn't seen much "flexibility yet in terms of policy around what we're doing to manage the pensions and the budget from the Republicans." He said he wasn't sure why that was happening, "but I'm working on it and I think they'll be more forthcoming as they get more comfortable moving forward." That may be wishful thinking.

The governor also defended his controversial plan to defer pension payments. "If all I'd come forward with was an extension of the pension ramp, you should tell me 'absolutely no' and we should tell the legislature they can't do that, too," he said, adding "But I didn't. I put together a package that I think helps us do the two things that you need us to do: pay the pensions and keep investing in the things that matter." His plan includes transferring state assets to the pension systems, and he focused mainly on unused or unneeded assets during his presentation.

He talked a bit about the upcoming fight over his graduated income tax proposal, saying the opposition is being led by the some of the same people who led Gov. Rauner's campaign. Pritzker told the investors the proponents were planning their own advertising campaign, but didn't say when that would begin. He said the proposal could change after legislative negotiations, but predicted the end product would be "difficult to assail."

Pritzker also stressed his independence from the state's existing political system, something he's been talking about to reporters lately. "I didn't come out of somebody's political organization," he claimed. "I have views, and I'm going to carry out those views as governor, but I'm not being pulled by lobbyists in one direction or another to spend money here or make changes there. I'm trying to do it from the perspective of what's the right thing for Illinois' future, for the people of Illinois."

I'll post a link to the raw audio and some more notes on the blog later this morning.

The toll to society is devastating and the toll for employers is astronomical. But the issue of prescription drug abuse is complex and testing in the workplace requires a firm understanding of the issue and a strategic design. Join Nina French as she presents a detailed overview of the problem of prescription drug use and abuse and explore the similarities and differences it has for employers when compared to illicit drug testing. This informative webinar will give participants insight into the cost of the problem to employers, drug free workplace program design, testing methodologies and combating prescription drug abuse now and in the future.

Sports betting at casinos and horse tracks, or wherever lotto tickets are sold? Illinois House Democrats offer options.

Illinois House Democrats are putting forth four proposals on how sports betting should be instituted in the state, with options including allowing the lottery to run the system.

How did the living room of a Chicago waffle house owner wind up in the Smithsonian?

Isaiah Muse wasn't a famous man. But for a time, especially during the 1970s, in his apartment in the South Shore Villa, the man threw ragers and after-hours get-togethers every weekend. The Smithsonian decided his bar provided a snapshot of black upper-middle class leisure in the years after the Civil Rights Act passed. Now it lives there.

Listed below is a short file update on the 2019 Spring Session of the 101st General Assembly. If you would like additional information on any legislation in this report, please click on the bill number and it will take you to the General Assembly's website where you can find the full text, bill history and other data. Please review the list and let me know if you have any questions or concerns.

Only the House was in session this week. Both chambers return on Tuesday, March 5th. The focus will continue to be on committee action for the next few weeks. Please note that March 22nd is the deadline to report substantive legislation from Senate Committees and March 29th is the deadline to report substantive legislation from House Committees. The committee schedule for next week is attached.

During a hearing of the House Revenue and Finance Committee on Thursday, the acting chief economist from the Illinois Department of Revenue reported that the state of Illinois can expect to see moderate economic growth in the upcoming fiscal year that will lead to higher tax receipts for the state. But there are warning signs on the national horizon that could signal an economic downturn in 2021. "We just finished up a banner year for the national economy," Marty Johnson said. "In 2018, (economic) output was expanding at the fastest pace since 2005. Unemployment was at a 49-year low. Consumer spending was robust." And while Illinois has lagged behind the nation in a number of categories, Johnson said the state has experienced growth, particularly in personal income and in some employment sectors such as manufacturing and construction. Those trends are expected to continue into the FY20 budget year with overall tax receipts growing about 4.3%, to $33.5 billion. The bulk of that growth is expected to come from individual and corporate income taxes, and sales taxes. All of that is the result of a continuing national economic expansion, which Johnson said is nearly the longest on record. But she said there is also reason to believe that expansion might not continue for long. Among other things, she said, the federal tax cuts that went into effect in 2018 gave a short-term boost to the national economy and that stimulus effect is expected to dissipate in the upcoming year. "The fading fiscal stimulus combined with increasing market volatility will limit growth in 2020 and the out-years," Johnson said.

House Democrats unveiled a package of bills on Wednesday they say are intended to help control the cost of prescription drugs. The package of bills is largely based on recommendations from Families USA, a national consumer health advocacy group. The bills call for regulating some drug prices in much the same way the state regulates utility rates; taxing drug price increases that exceed the rate of inflation; requiring drug companies to disclose more information about their prices; and creating a mechanism for the state to become a licensed wholesaler of cheaper imported drugs from Canada. Republicans, however, are arguing that the entire issue of prescription drug costs is beyond the scope of state government, and that some of the Democrats' proposals could actually end up costing taxpayers more and make life-saving medications less available to people in the state.

With discussions of a graduated income tax about to ramp up, House Republicans on Wednesday filed a resolution showing they are unanimously opposed to the idea. HR 153, sponsored by House Republican Leader Durkin with all other House Republicans as so-sponsors, declares that "a graduated income tax in Illinois would only create added burdens and dissuade economic prosperity, two unintended consequences that proponents of enacting such a tax system fail to mention." Governor Pritzker said in his budget speech that the only way for Illinois to finally solve its financial problems is to bring a graduated income tax system to the state. He has not specified what rates would apply to what income levels. However, he's said his plan would hike taxes only on the rich and actually result in a tax cut for low and middle income taxpayers. The resolution is currently in the House Rules Committee.

Several years ago the state implemented a system of hiring private companies to manage and coordinate care for Medicaid patients. The system, called HealthChoice Illinois, using private insurance companies known as managed care organizations (MCOs) now covers about two-thirds of the state. The goal of the program was for patients to receive better, more comprehensive care. In addition, the state would ultimately save money, and the companies would earn more profit, by reducing unnecessary expenses for things like emergency room visits and hospital readmissions. Instead, the hospital association argues, the new system has produced only bureaucratic delays that make it more difficult for hospitals to get paid, and for patients to access the care they need. In response to concerns raised by hospitals and other health care providers in the Medicaid system, lawmakers have introduced legislation to change the managed care system, including: requiring all MCOs to use standardized processes for a number of different functions, such as determining whether a service is medically necessary; allowing providers to appeal claim denials to an independent, third-party reviewer; and, requiring, among other things, that MCOs reimburse critical access hospitals and safety net clinics on an expedited schedule, similar to the schedule the state uses for non-managed-care patients at those facilities.

Subject: March 15, 2019 Public Health Legislative File Update

Listed below is a short file update on the 2019 Spring Session of the 101st General Assembly. If you would like additional information on any legislation in this report, please click on the bill number and it will take you to the General Assembly's website where you can find the full text, bill history and other data. Please review the list and let me know if you have any questions or concerns.

Both chambers were in session this week and are scheduled to return on Tuesday, March 19th. The focus will continue to be on committee action for the next couple of weeks. Please note that March 22nd is the deadline to report substantive legislation from Senate Committees and March 29th is the deadline to report substantive legislation from House Committees. The committee schedule for next week is attached.

The legislature has approved the Tobacco 21 bill that would raise the age to purchase tobacco products, electronic cigarettes, and alternative nicotine products from at least 18 years of age to at least 21 years of age. HB 345 (Representative Lilly and Senator Morrison) passed the House on a vote of 82-31-0 and the Senate on a vote of 39-16-1. The measure now goes to the Governor for review.

Representative Harris has introduced an amendment to HB 465, which makes various reforms aimed at lowering prescription drug costs for patients in Illinois. Harris' measure defines and regulates pharmacy benefit manager (PBM) practices within Illinois; requires pharmacists to inform customers of a less expensive drug product for their prescription; protects consumers entering the emergency room from having coverage of treatment rejected; and prohibits insurers from adopting "copay accumulator programs," that prevent manufacturer copay cards from reducing out-of-pocket expenses for patients. PBMs generally work on behalf of health insurance plans to negotiate drug prices and develop "formularies" – rules that determine what drugs will be covered for particular conditions, and in some instances, under what conditions those drugs will be covered. In addition, in the case of high-cost drugs, PBMs will often set a "maximum allowable cost" that limits how much pharmacies will be reimbursed for a particular drug.

Independent pharmacies complain those maximum allowable costs are often less than the wholesale price they pay to manufacturers to obtain the drug. They also argue that certain PBMs have direct ties to large, retail chain pharmacies, such as CVS Health, which operates the nation's largest chain of retail pharmacies and provides pharmacy benefit management services.

Upcoming Important Dates and Deadlines:

- March 19, 2019 – Next Scheduled Session Day
- March 22, 2019 – Senate Committee Deadline for Substantive Senate Bills
- March 29, 2019 – House Committee Deadline for House Substantive Bills

MARCH RECAP: Committee Deadlines the Death Knell of Legislation

With the Senate's committee deadline behind us and the House's committee deadline this week for substantive bills (non-appropriations) to receive a hearing, theoretically, a large number of bills may revert back to their assignment committees where they will likely die. These established deadlines help the senate president and speaker of the house and their staffs manage the large volume of legislation filed by General Assembly.

To date, both chambers have advanced non-controversial bills out of committee for consideration. However, there are ongoing discussions on large topical areas such as gaming expansion, marijuana legalization, and a Capitol Infrastructure Bill. It's my observation that both chambers are being more deliberative and methodical in approaching these issues, which will likely converge in an omnibus budget package later this spring. With approximately 30 percent of the General Assembly being new, there are several bills pending that add workplace mandates and other regulations focused on sexual harassment remedies, prevention, and transparency. I encourage you to review the legislative items below, along with the legislative tracking reports that are linked in the banner below.

One last point if I may; during the past three months, 14 Illinois State Police Officers have been rear-ended or struck while performing roadside duties with their emergency lights activated. Let's give those troopers and all first responders a break by slowing down and moving over so they can safely return to their families at the end of their shifts.

POLICING & POLICY

Florida Moves Toward Blocking Access To Footage Of Mass Killings.

The South Florida Sun Sentinel   (3/27, Swisher) reports, "Floridians could soon be blocked from obtaining graphic images of mass killings." The Florida Senate voted 40-0 on Wednesday "to approve SB 186, which creates a public records exemption for video, photographs and audio capturing the killing of three or more people, not including the perpetrator." Supporters "say the footage is traumatic to family members of victims." The Sun Sentinel adds, "First Amendment groups initially voiced concerns that the measure could hurt efforts to hold law enforcement and the government accountable for lapses." A previous version of the bill "was broader, exempting 'all acts or events that cause or otherwise relate to the death of a person.'"

London Police To Double Number Of Officers In School.

The Guardian \(UK\)   (3/27, Weale) reports, "The Metropolitan police are planning to increase the number of officers working full-time in schools in London, as concerns grow about a surge in knife crime." According to the Guardian, "Deputy assistant commissioner Mark Simmons told an inquiry into knife crime there were 420 police officers with full-time roles in schools in the capital – up from 280 12 to 18 months ago – and that the aim was to get the total up to just under 600." The Guardian adds, "The use of officers in schools, though supported by many headteachers, has been seen as controversial because of concerns about the appropriateness of police in an education context, potentially gathering intelligence on young people." Simmons, "who was being questioned by MPs on the cross-party education select committee, said the aim of having more officers in schools was to develop better relationships and improve engagement between young people and the police."

The Independent \(UK\)   (3/27, Busby) reports that Simmons told the panel that pupils should be stopped and searched in schools in areas with knife crime problems. Simmons said, "We are investing heavily in more officers working full-time in schools," he told the Commons' education select committee inquiry on knife crime. "We have gone from 280 or so 12 to 18 months ago to 420 officers full-time, and our ambition is to get to just under 600."

Lakewood, Ohio Police Department Seeks Additional Auxiliary Officers.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer   (3/27, Benson) reports that the Lakewood, Ohio, Police Department "is currently seeking new recruits for its auxiliary police unit, which assists with park patrol, traffic direction and crowd control at organized community events such as the Summer Band Concerts, Fourth of July Parade and Fireworks, Lakewood Arts Festival and Lakewood Community Festival. 'They provide support to all of our operations, especially special events,' said Police Chief Timothy Malley. 'Right now, we're at 17 auxiliary officers, and we'd like to have 30. We ask (that) they try to volunteer 120 hours a year. Usually, it's with our special events in the spring, summer and early fall. They're not doing police work investigating crimes or making arrests. They're basically helping us keep the citizens of the community safe during times of need, including weather catastrophes when there are downed wires and street lights out.'"

New Jersey Launches Campaign To Curb Distracted Driving.

The AP   (3/27) reports, "New Jersey will soon kick off its annual campaign against distracted drivers, particularly those who text while driving." According to the AP, "Authorities say 207 police departments and law enforcement agencies will get more than $1 million in grants overall for additional patrols to issue tickets." The AP adds, "The distracted driving fines range between $200 to $400 for a first offense and can lead to license suspensions beyond a third offense." The targeted enforcement campaign "begins Monday and runs through April 21, coinciding with National Distracted Driving Awareness Month." During last year's enforcement period, "officers issued more than 13,000 tickets for cell phone use while driving and nearly 6,000 tickets for careless driving."

FROM IACP

Registration for the Annual IACP Training Conference on Drugs, Alcohol, and Impaired Driving (DAID) is now open. Early bird registration will be available through April 27, 2019. Register today to secure the best value. This year's conference will take place August 10 – 12, 2019, at the Anaheim Marriott in Anaheim, California.

CRIME & DRUGS

Joint Federal-Local Operation Praised For Getting Criminals Off Baltimore Streets.

WBAL-TV Baltimore (3/27, Amara) reports from Baltimore, "A huge effort to crackdown on crime in Baltimore City is working, according to Gov. Larry Hogan in an announcement on Wednesday." According to WBAL-TV, "The U.S. Marshal for Maryland joined him along with representatives from the Secret Service, Homeland Security, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and dozens of federal, state and local agencies." US Marshal Johnny Hughes "cut right to the chase, 'Operation Seven Sentinels' just ended, he said, and it was a total success." WBAL-TV adds, "Ordered by Hogan, launched by the U.S. Marshals service, a six-week mission to arrest as many violent fugitives as possible." The Baltimore Police Department "had to be beefed up to do that much in that time frame, so the FBI, the ATF and 27 federal, state and local agencies helped with manpower," and "the team was handed 800 warrants, 400 of them met the criteria."

The Baltimore Sun (3/27, Prudente) reports that Hogan and Hughes "announced Wednesday the arrests of 264 people as part of a three-week crackdown on violent fugitives in Baltimore." Hogan "was in federal court in Baltimore for the announcement of results from Operation Seven Sentinels, a push to capture the city's most dangerous fugitives." According to the Sun, "More than two dozen law enforcement agencies from city police to the FBI joined in." The agencies "arrested 25 people wanted for homicide or attempted homicide, 74 people wanted for assault and 27 people wanted for drug crimes," and "recovered 140 grams of heroin, 106 grams of cocaine and $50,000 in cash in the three weeks. 'We should all feel a little safer now that they're off the streets,' Baltimore Police Commissioner Michael Harrison told the crowd."

Wisconsin Man Pleads Guilty To Kidnapping Jayme Closs, Murdering Her Parents.

The CBS Evening News reported, "A Wisconsin man pleaded guilty to kidnapping 13-year-old Jayme Closs and killing her parents." Jake Patterson "is 21, now facing life in prison." Patterson "held Closs for three months," and "was arrested in January minutes after Closs escaped and flagged down a woman who was walking her dog."

ABC World News Tonight reported, "As he's led away in cuffs, you can see that he tells the courtroom. 'Bye, Jayme,' even though she's not there." Jayme "had escaped Patterson's rural cabin after being held for 88 days, finding help." ABC (Benitez) added, "She told investigators she was barricaded under his bed for up to 12 hours at a time with no food, water, or bathroom breaks," and "when asked why he did it, Patterson wrote to a reporter, in a handwritten letter, 'This was mostly on impulse. I don't think like a serial killer.' He told police he spotted her at the bus stop, and decided she was the one to kidnap."

The AP (3/27, Karnowski) reports that Patterson "sniffled and his voice caught as he pleaded guilty to two counts of first-degree intentional homicide and one count of kidnapping," and "as part of a plea deal, prosecutors dropped an armed burglary charge." Patterson "faces up to life in prison when he is sentenced May 24."

NBC News (3/27) reports, "Earlier this month, Patterson sent a letter to NBC News affiliate KARE apologizing and revealing his plans to enter a guilty plea so Jayme and her family would not have 'to worry about a trial.'" Patterson "also called a reporter with WCCO saying that he loved Jayme and detailed how they watched television, played games and 'cooked a lot' during the almost three months he held her captive. 'The reason I did this is complicated,' Patterson wrote to KARE reporter Lou Raguse, who had sent him questions about the kidnapping. 'No one will believe or can even imagine how sorry I am for hurting Jayme this much. Can't express it.'"

WEAU-TV Eau Claire, WI (3/27, Alowairdi, Horne) reports on the "nationwide search" that "started on Oct. 15, 2018, when James Closs, 56, and Denise Closs, 46, were found shot to death in their home in Barron." Authorities issued an Amber Alert for Jayme, and "the next day, investigators said they didn't consider Jayme a suspect in her parents' deaths." The FBI "offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to Jayme's location." The AP (3/27) runs a timeline of events in the case.

FBI, Arlington County, Virginia Police Charge Nine In Prostitution Round-Up.

WDVM-TV Washington (3/27, Burnett) reports, "After a two-day operation led by the FBI and the Arlington County Police Department, nine people have been charged" with crimes related to prostitution. The FBI's Washington Field Office and local law enforcement "attempted to locate juveniles being exploited into sex trade." While the investigation did not identify juveniles, "nine people were charged with a total of eight misdemeanors and two felony charges," and "all but one were charged with misdemeanor prostitution." ARLnow \(VA\) (3/27, Airey) and WRC-TV Washington (3/27, Paz) also report this story.

Expert: As Opioid Prescriptions Decline, Death Rate Among Chronic Pain Sufferers Rising.

John Heubusch, a cancer patient and executive director of the Ronald Reagan Presidential Foundation and Institute, writes in the Washington Post (3/27, Heubusch) that "opioid prescriptions have shrunk substantially" in recent years amid government pressure, but "in a bitter irony, opioid overdose deaths continue to hover at an all-time high. Many chronic pain patients, denied prescriptions, are self-medicating on the street," and "some who have lost all hope for pain relief are choosing to end their pain by ending it all. The risk of suicide among patients with chronic pain is twice that of those without it." Heubusch argues that though the government "can regulate prescriptions for those in need, it cannot regulate pain."

Investigators Tackle Connecticut Cold Cases.

The Connecticut Post   (3/27, Backus) reports, “As a former supervisor with the Chief State’s Attorney’s Cold Case Unit, Patrick Griffin understands the heartache the families of murder victims suffer when a case goes cold,” so “when he was appointed as the State’s Attorney for the Judicial District of New Haven in 2016, he formed his own cold case unit for the municipalities the New Haven courthouse serves.” The “group made its first arrest last July, charging Christopher Calhoun with the 2011 New Haven shooting death of Isaiah Gantt. ‘That’s one case that would have never been solved,’ Griffin said.” Chief State’s Attorney Kevin Kane “estimates there are 1,500 to 2,000 unsolved homicides in the state that date back to the late 1970s and early 1980s.”

New Zealand Police Probe Fake Online Submissions For Handing In Guns.

MSN \(NZL\)   (3/26) reports, “Police are investigating a rash of fake submissions on an online form to hand in firearms which are being banned in the wake of the Christchurch mosque attacks.” The online form “for owners to declare their intention to hand in guns was spammed with false notifications on Friday.” MSN adds, “Some forms were reportedly submitted by gun lobbyists apparently trying to interfere with the process for handing in firearms.” Police “blocked the online form to foreign users on Friday, and Assistant Commissioner Tusha Penny said the High Tech Crime Unit was investigating.”

Facebook To Ban White Nationalist Content.

The New York Times   (3/27, Stack) reports “Facebook said on Wednesday that it would ban white nationalist content from its platforms, a significant policy change that bows to longstanding demands from civil rights groups who said the tech giant was failing to confront the powerful reach of white extremism on social media.” The Times adds “the company had previously banned white supremacist content from its platforms but maintained a murky distinction between white supremacy, white nationalism and white separatism.” Yesterday, “it said that its views had been changed by civil society groups and experts in race relations and that it now believed ‘white nationalism and separatism cannot be meaningfully separated from white supremacy and organized hate groups.’”

Reuters   (3/27) reports, “Civil rights groups have said social media giants have failed to confront extremism and that was under the spotlight this month after a suspected white supremacist broadcast live footage of his attacks in Christchurch, New Zealand.” Facebook, Twitter Inc and Alphabet Inc’s YouTube “have been under pressure to remove white supremacist and neo-Nazi content from their platforms, along with fake news and other types of abusive posts,” and “in response, Facebook has beefed up its content monitoring teams and taken down event pages that were used to promote and organize rallies by white supremacist groups.”

The Wall Street Journal   (3/27, Thomas, Subscription Publication), among other news outlets, also reports the story.

New Zealand Police Investigate Whether Man Who Died In Standoff Was Linked To Mosque Attacks.

Reuters   (3/27) reports, “New Zealand police are investigating whether a man who died from a stab wound in a standoff on Wednesday had any connection with the March 15 shooting attack on two mosques in Christchurch, which killed 50 people.” According to Reuters, “National police commissioner Mike Bush said Christchurch police found several firearms in a search of a local property late Tuesday evening,” and “at about 12.30 a.m. on Wednesday, they located a 54 year-old man sought in relation to the firearms in a stopped vehicle.” Police negotiators “spoke with the man over a number of hours and officers approached the vehicle at around 3.40 a.m.,” and Bush “said the man was found in the car critically injured with what appeared to be a stab wound. A knife was located in the vehicle.”

Austrian Police Arrest Iraqi Over German Train Attacks.

The AP   (3/27) reports from Berlin, “Austrian authorities have arrested an Iraqi man suspected of carrying out unsuccessful attacks on trains in neighboring Germany last year and sympathizing with the Islamic State group, officials in the two countries said Wednesday.” According to the AP, “The 42-year-old was arrested on Monday in Vienna, where he lives.” Vienna prosecutors “said he is suspected of ‘carrying out terrorist attacks on railway lines in Germany in October and December 2018.’” In October, “a high-speed train hit a steel cable stretched over the tracks between electrification masts on the Nuremberg-Munich line,” and “an Arabic-language note, which investigators have described as threatening but unspecific, was found nearby as well as other documents suggesting a link to IS.”

Florida Moves Toward Blocking Access To Footage Of Mass Killings.

The South Florida Sun Sentinel   (3/27, Swisher) reports, "Floridians could soon be blocked from obtaining graphic images of mass killings." The Florida Senate voted 40-0 on Wednesday "to approve SB 186, which creates a public records exemption for video, photographs and audio capturing the killing of three or more people, not including the perpetrator." Supporters "say the footage is traumatic to family members of victims." The Sun Sentinel adds, "First Amendment groups initially voiced concerns that the measure could hurt efforts to hold law enforcement and the government accountable for lapses." A previous version of the bill "was broader, exempting 'all acts or events that cause or otherwise relate to the death of a person.'"

London Police To Double Number Of Officers In School.

The Guardian \(UK\)   (3/27, Weale) reports, "The Metropolitan police are planning to increase the number of officers working full-time in schools in London, as concerns grow about a surge in knife crime." According to the Guardian, "Deputy assistant commissioner Mark Simmons told an inquiry into knife crime there were 420 police officers with full-time roles in schools in the capital – up from 280 12 to 18 months ago – and that the aim was to get the total up to just under 600." The Guardian adds, "The use of officers in schools, though supported by many headteachers, has been seen as controversial because of concerns about the appropriateness of police in an education context, potentially gathering intelligence on young people." Simmons, "who was being questioned by MPs on the cross-party education select committee, said the aim of having more officers in schools was to develop better relationships and improve engagement between young people and the police."

The Independent \(UK\)   (3/27, Busby) reports that Simmons told the panel that pupils should be stopped and searched in schools in areas with knife crime problems. Simmons said, "We are investing heavily in more officers working full-time in schools," he told the Commons' education select committee inquiry on knife crime. "We have gone from 280 or so 12 to 18 months ago to 420 officers full-time, and our ambition is to get to just under 600."

Lakewood, Ohio Police Department Seeks Additional Auxiliary Officers.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer   (3/27, Benson) reports that the Lakewood, Ohio, Police Department "is currently seeking new recruits for its auxiliary police unit, which assists with park patrol, traffic direction and crowd control at organized community events such as the Summer Band Concerts, Fourth of July Parade and Fireworks, Lakewood Arts Festival and Lakewood Community Festival. 'They provide support to all of our operations, especially special events,' said Police Chief Timothy Malley. 'Right now, we're at 17 auxiliary officers, and we'd like to have 30. We ask (that) they try to volunteer 120 hours a year. Usually, it's with our special events in the spring, summer and early fall. They're not doing police work investigating crimes or making arrests. They're basically helping us keep the citizens of the community safe during times of need, including weather catastrophes when there are downed wires and street lights out.'"

New Jersey Launches Campaign To Curb Distracted Driving.

The AP   (3/27) reports, "New Jersey will soon kick off its annual campaign against distracted drivers, particularly those who text while driving." According to the AP, "Authorities say 207 police departments and law enforcement agencies will get more than $1 million in grants overall for additional patrols to issue tickets." The AP adds, "The distracted driving fines range between $200 to $400 for a first offense and can lead to license suspensions beyond a third offense." The targeted enforcement campaign "begins Monday and runs through April 21, coinciding with National Distracted Driving Awareness Month." During last year's enforcement period, "officers issued more than 13,000 tickets for cell phone use while driving and nearly 6,000 tickets for careless driving."

CRIME & DRUGS

Joint Federal-Local Operation Praised For Getting Criminals Off Baltimore Streets.

WBAL-TV Baltimore (3/27, Amara) reports from Baltimore, "A huge effort to crackdown on crime in Baltimore City is working, according to Gov. Larry Hogan in an announcement on Wednesday." According to WBAL-TV, "The U.S. Marshal for Maryland joined him along with representatives from the Secret Service, Homeland Security, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and dozens of federal, state and local agencies." US Marshal Johnny Hughes "cut right to the chase, 'Operation Seven Sentinels' just ended, he said, and it was a total success." WBAL-TV adds, "Ordered by Hogan, launched by the U.S. Marshals service, a six-week mission to arrest as many violent fugitives as possible." The Baltimore Police Department "had to be beefed up to do that much in that time frame, so the FBI, the ATF and 27 federal, state and local agencies helped with manpower," and "the team was handed 800 warrants, 400 of them met the criteria."

The Baltimore Sun (3/27, Prudente) reports that Hogan and Hughes "announced Wednesday the arrests of 264 people as part of a three-week crackdown on violent fugitives in Baltimore." Hogan "was in federal court in Baltimore for the announcement of results from Operation Seven Sentinels, a push to capture the city's most dangerous fugitives." According to the Sun, "More than two dozen law enforcement agencies from city police to the FBI joined in." The agencies "arrested 25 people wanted for homicide or attempted homicide, 74 people wanted for assault and 27 people wanted for drug crimes," and "recovered 140 grams of heroin, 106 grams of cocaine and $50,000 in cash in the three weeks. 'We should all feel a little safer now that they're off the streets,' Baltimore Police Commissioner Michael Harrison told the crowd."

Wisconsin Man Pleads Guilty To Kidnapping Jayme Closs, Murdering Her Parents.

The CBS Evening News reported, "A Wisconsin man pleaded guilty to kidnapping 13-year-old Jayme Closs and killing her parents." Jake Patterson "is 21, now facing life in prison." Patterson "held Closs for three months," and "was arrested in January minutes after Closs escaped and flagged down a woman who was walking her dog."

ABC World News Tonight reported, "As he's led away in cuffs, you can see that he tells the courtroom. 'Bye, Jayme,' even though she's not there." Jayme "had escaped Patterson's rural cabin after being held for 88 days, finding help." ABC (Benitez) added, "She told investigators she was barricaded under his bed for up to 12 hours at a time with no food, water, or bathroom breaks," and "when asked why he did it, Patterson wrote to a reporter, in a handwritten letter, 'This was mostly on impulse. I don't think like a serial killer.' He told police he spotted her at the bus stop, and decided she was the one to kidnap."

The AP (3/27, Karnowski) reports that Patterson "sniffled and his voice caught as he pleaded guilty to two counts of first-degree intentional homicide and one count of kidnapping," and "as part of a plea deal, prosecutors dropped an armed burglary charge." Patterson "faces up to life in prison when he is sentenced May 24."

NBC News (3/27) reports, "Earlier this month, Patterson sent a letter to NBC News affiliate KARE apologizing and revealing his plans to enter a guilty plea so Jayme and her family would not have 'to worry about a trial.'" Patterson "also called a reporter with WCCO saying that he loved Jayme and detailed how they watched television, played games and 'cooked a lot' during the almost three months he held her captive. 'The reason I did this is complicated,' Patterson wrote to KARE reporter Lou Raguse, who had sent him questions about the kidnapping. 'No one will believe or can even imagine how sorry I am for hurting Jayme this much. Can't express it.'"

WEAU-TV Eau Claire, WI (3/27, Alowairdi, Horne) reports on the "nationwide search" that "started on Oct. 15, 2018, when James Closs, 56, and Denise Closs, 46, were found shot to death in their home in Barron." Authorities issued an Amber Alert for Jayme, and "the next day, investigators said they didn't consider Jayme a suspect in her parents' deaths." The FBI "offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to Jayme's location." The AP (3/27) runs a timeline of events in the case.

FBI, Arlington County, Virginia Police Charge Nine In Prostitution Round-Up.

WDVM-TV Washington (3/27, Burnett) reports, "After a two-day operation led by the FBI and the Arlington County Police Department, nine people have been charged" with crimes related to prostitution. The FBI's Washington Field Office and local law enforcement "attempted to locate juveniles being exploited into sex trade." While the investigation did not identify juveniles, "nine people were charged with a total of eight misdemeanors and two felony charges," and "all but one were charged with misdemeanor prostitution." ARLnow \(VA\) (3/27, Airey) and WRC-TV Washington (3/27, Paz) also report this story.

Expert: As Opioid Prescriptions Decline, Death Rate Among Chronic Pain Sufferers Rising.

John Heubusch, a cancer patient and executive director of the Ronald Reagan Presidential Foundation and Institute, writes in the Washington Post (3/27, Heubusch) that "opioid prescriptions have shrunk substantially" in recent years amid government pressure, but "in a bitter irony, opioid overdose deaths continue to hover at an all-time high. Many chronic pain patients, denied prescriptions, are self-medicating on the street," and "some who have lost all hope for pain relief are choosing to end their pain by ending it all. The risk of suicide among patients with chronic pain is twice that of those without it." Heubusch argues that though the government "can regulate prescriptions for those in need, it cannot regulate pain."

Investigators Tackle Connecticut Cold Cases.

The Connecticut Post   (3/27, Backus) reports, “As a former supervisor with the Chief State’s Attorney’s Cold Case Unit, Patrick Griffin understands the heartache the families of murder victims suffer when a case goes cold,” so “when he was appointed as the State’s Attorney for the Judicial District of New Haven in 2016, he formed his own cold case unit for the municipalities the New Haven courthouse serves.” The “group made its first arrest last July, charging Christopher Calhoun with the 2011 New Haven shooting death of Isaiah Gantt. ‘That’s one case that would have never been solved,’ Griffin said.” Chief State’s Attorney Kevin Kane “estimates there are 1,500 to 2,000 unsolved homicides in the state that date back to the late 1970s and early 1980s.”

New Zealand Police Probe Fake Online Submissions For Handing In Guns.

MSN \(NZL\)   (3/26) reports, “Police are investigating a rash of fake submissions on an online form to hand in firearms which are being banned in the wake of the Christchurch mosque attacks.” The online form “for owners to declare their intention to hand in guns was spammed with false notifications on Friday.” MSN adds, “Some forms were reportedly submitted by gun lobbyists apparently trying to interfere with the process for handing in firearms.” Police “blocked the online form to foreign users on Friday, and Assistant Commissioner Tusha Penny said the High Tech Crime Unit was investigating.”

Facebook To Ban White Nationalist Content.

The New York Times   (3/27, Stack) reports “Facebook said on Wednesday that it would ban white nationalist content from its platforms, a significant policy change that bows to longstanding demands from civil rights groups who said the tech giant was failing to confront the powerful reach of white extremism on social media.” The Times adds “the company had previously banned white supremacist content from its platforms but maintained a murky distinction between white supremacy, white nationalism and white separatism.” Yesterday, “it said that its views had been changed by civil society groups and experts in race relations and that it now believed ‘white nationalism and separatism cannot be meaningfully separated from white supremacy and organized hate groups.’”

Reuters   (3/27) reports, “Civil rights groups have said social media giants have failed to confront extremism and that was under the spotlight this month after a suspected white supremacist broadcast live footage of his attacks in Christchurch, New Zealand.” Facebook, Twitter Inc and Alphabet Inc’s YouTube “have been under pressure to remove white supremacist and neo-Nazi content from their platforms, along with fake news and other types of abusive posts,” and “in response, Facebook has beefed up its content monitoring teams and taken down event pages that were used to promote and organize rallies by white supremacist groups.”

The Wall Street Journal   (3/27, Thomas, Subscription Publication), among other news outlets, also reports the story.

New Zealand Police Investigate Whether Man Who Died In Standoff Was Linked To Mosque Attacks.

Reuters   (3/27) reports, “New Zealand police are investigating whether a man who died from a stab wound in a standoff on Wednesday had any connection with the March 15 shooting attack on two mosques in Christchurch, which killed 50 people.” According to Reuters, “National police commissioner Mike Bush said Christchurch police found several firearms in a search of a local property late Tuesday evening,” and “at about 12.30 a.m. on Wednesday, they located a 54 year-old man sought in relation to the firearms in a stopped vehicle.” Police negotiators “spoke with the man over a number of hours and officers approached the vehicle at around 3.40 a.m.,” and Bush “said the man was found in the car critically injured with what appeared to be a stab wound. A knife was located in the vehicle.”

Austrian Police Arrest Iraqi Over German Train Attacks.

The AP   (3/27) reports from Berlin, “Austrian authorities have arrested an Iraqi man suspected of carrying out unsuccessful attacks on trains in neighboring Germany last year and sympathizing with the Islamic State group, officials in the two countries said Wednesday.” According to the AP, “The 42-year-old was arrested on Monday in Vienna, where he lives.” Vienna prosecutors “said he is suspected of ‘carrying out terrorist attacks on railway lines in Germany in October and December 2018.’” In October, “a high-speed train hit a steel cable stretched over the tracks between electrification masts on the Nuremberg-Munich line,” and “an Arabic-language note, which investigators have described as threatening but unspecific, was found nearby as well as other documents suggesting a link to IS.”

Florida Moves Toward Blocking Access To Footage Of Mass Killings.

The South Florida Sun Sentinel   (3/27, Swisher) reports, "Floridians could soon be blocked from obtaining graphic images of mass killings." The Florida Senate voted 40-0 on Wednesday "to approve SB 186, which creates a public records exemption for video, photographs and audio capturing the killing of three or more people, not including the perpetrator." Supporters "say the footage is traumatic to family members of victims." The Sun Sentinel adds, "First Amendment groups initially voiced concerns that the measure could hurt efforts to hold law enforcement and the government accountable for lapses." A previous version of the bill "was broader, exempting 'all acts or events that cause or otherwise relate to the death of a person.'"

London Police To Double Number Of Officers In School.

The Guardian \(UK\)   (3/27, Weale) reports, "The Metropolitan police are planning to increase the number of officers working full-time in schools in London, as concerns grow about a surge in knife crime." According to the Guardian, "Deputy assistant commissioner Mark Simmons told an inquiry into knife crime there were 420 police officers with full-time roles in schools in the capital – up from 280 12 to 18 months ago – and that the aim was to get the total up to just under 600." The Guardian adds, "The use of officers in schools, though supported by many headteachers, has been seen as controversial because of concerns about the appropriateness of police in an education context, potentially gathering intelligence on young people." Simmons, "who was being questioned by MPs on the cross-party education select committee, said the aim of having more officers in schools was to develop better relationships and improve engagement between young people and the police."

The Independent \(UK\)   (3/27, Busby) reports that Simmons told the panel that pupils should be stopped and searched in schools in areas with knife crime problems. Simmons said, "We are investing heavily in more officers working full-time in schools," he told the Commons' education select committee inquiry on knife crime. "We have gone from 280 or so 12 to 18 months ago to 420 officers full-time, and our ambition is to get to just under 600."

Lakewood, Ohio Police Department Seeks Additional Auxiliary Officers.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer   (3/27, Benson) reports that the Lakewood, Ohio, Police Department "is currently seeking new recruits for its auxiliary police unit, which assists with park patrol, traffic direction and crowd control at organized community events such as the Summer Band Concerts, Fourth of July Parade and Fireworks, Lakewood Arts Festival and Lakewood Community Festival. 'They provide support to all of our operations, especially special events,' said Police Chief Timothy Malley. 'Right now, we're at 17 auxiliary officers, and we'd like to have 30. We ask (that) they try to volunteer 120 hours a year. Usually, it's with our special events in the spring, summer and early fall. They're not doing police work investigating crimes or making arrests. They're basically helping us keep the citizens of the community safe during times of need, including weather catastrophes when there are downed wires and street lights out.'"

New Jersey Launches Campaign To Curb Distracted Driving.

The AP   (3/27) reports, "New Jersey will soon kick off its annual campaign against distracted drivers, particularly those who text while driving." According to the AP, "Authorities say 207 police departments and law enforcement agencies will get more than $1 million in grants overall for additional patrols to issue tickets." The AP adds, "The distracted driving fines range between $200 to $400 for a first offense and can lead to license suspensions beyond a third offense." The targeted enforcement campaign "begins Monday and runs through April 21, coinciding with National Distracted Driving Awareness Month." During last year's enforcement period, "officers issued more than 13,000 tickets for cell phone use while driving and nearly 6,000 tickets for careless driving."

FROM IACP

Registration for the Annual IACP Training Conference on Drugs, Alcohol, and Impaired Driving (DAID) is now open. Early bird registration will be available through April 27, 2019. ## CRIME & DRUGS

Joint Federal-Local Operation Praised For Getting Criminals Off Baltimore Streets.

WBAL-TV Baltimore (3/27, Amara) reports from Baltimore, "A huge effort to crackdown on crime in Baltimore City is working, according to Gov. Larry Hogan in an announcement on Wednesday." According to WBAL-TV, "The U.S. Marshal for Maryland joined him along with representatives from the Secret Service, Homeland Security, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and dozens of federal, state and local agencies." US Marshal Johnny Hughes "cut right to the chase, 'Operation Seven Sentinels' just ended, he said, and it was a total success." WBAL-TV adds, "Ordered by Hogan, launched by the U.S. Marshals service, a six-week mission to arrest as many violent fugitives as possible." The Baltimore Police Department "had to be beefed up to do that much in that time frame, so the FBI, the ATF and 27 federal, state and local agencies helped with manpower," and "the team was handed 800 warrants, 400 of them met the criteria."

The Baltimore Sun (3/27, Prudente) reports that Hogan and Hughes "announced Wednesday the arrests of 264 people as part of a three-week crackdown on violent fugitives in Baltimore." Hogan "was in federal court in Baltimore for the announcement of results from Operation Seven Sentinels, a push to capture the city's most dangerous fugitives." According to the Sun, "More than two dozen law enforcement agencies from city police to the FBI joined in." The agencies "arrested 25 people wanted for homicide or attempted homicide, 74 people wanted for assault and 27 people wanted for drug crimes," and "recovered 140 grams of heroin, 106 grams of cocaine and $50,000 in cash in the three weeks. 'We should all feel a little safer now that they're off the streets,' Baltimore Police Commissioner Michael Harrison told the crowd."

Wisconsin Man Pleads Guilty To Kidnapping Jayme Closs, Murdering Her Parents.

The CBS Evening News reported, "A Wisconsin man pleaded guilty to kidnapping 13-year-old Jayme Closs and killing her parents." Jake Patterson "is 21, now facing life in prison." Patterson "held Closs for three months," and "was arrested in January minutes after Closs escaped and flagged down a woman who was walking her dog."

ABC World News Tonight reported, "As he's led away in cuffs, you can see that he tells the courtroom. 'Bye, Jayme,' even though she's not there." Jayme "had escaped Patterson's rural cabin after being held for 88 days, finding help." ABC (Benitez) added, "She told investigators she was barricaded under his bed for up to 12 hours at a time with no food, water, or bathroom breaks," and "when asked why he did it, Patterson wrote to a reporter, in a handwritten letter, 'This was mostly on impulse. I don't think like a serial killer.' He told police he spotted her at the bus stop, and decided she was the one to kidnap."

The AP (3/27, Karnowski) reports that Patterson "sniffled and his voice caught as he pleaded guilty to two counts of first-degree intentional homicide and one count of kidnapping," and "as part of a plea deal, prosecutors dropped an armed burglary charge." Patterson "faces up to life in prison when he is sentenced May 24."

NBC News (3/27) reports, "Earlier this month, Patterson sent a letter to NBC News affiliate KARE apologizing and revealing his plans to enter a guilty plea so Jayme and her family would not have 'to worry about a trial.'" Patterson "also called a reporter with WCCO saying that he loved Jayme and detailed how they watched television, played games and 'cooked a lot' during the almost three months he held her captive. 'The reason I did this is complicated,' Patterson wrote to KARE reporter Lou Raguse, who had sent him questions about the kidnapping. 'No one will believe or can even imagine how sorry I am for hurting Jayme this much. Can't express it.'"

WEAU-TV Eau Claire, WI (3/27, Alowairdi, Horne) reports on the "nationwide search" that "started on Oct. 15, 2018, when James Closs, 56, and Denise Closs, 46, were found shot to death in their home in Barron." Authorities issued an Amber Alert for Jayme, and "the next day, investigators said they didn't consider Jayme a suspect in her parents' deaths." The FBI "offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to Jayme's location." The AP (3/27) runs a timeline of events in the case.

FBI, Arlington County, Virginia Police Charge Nine In Prostitution Round-Up.

WDVM-TV Washington (3/27, Burnett) reports, "After a two-day operation led by the FBI and the Arlington County Police Department, nine people have been charged" with crimes related to prostitution. The FBI's Washington Field Office and local law enforcement "attempted to locate juveniles being exploited into sex trade." While the investigation did not identify juveniles, "nine people were charged with a total of eight misdemeanors and two felony charges," and "all but one were charged with misdemeanor prostitution." ARLnow \(VA\) (3/27, Airey) and WRC-TV Washington (3/27, Paz) also report this story.

Expert: As Opioid Prescriptions Decline, Death Rate Among Chronic Pain Sufferers Rising.

John Heubusch, a cancer patient and executive director of the Ronald Reagan Presidential Foundation and Institute, writes in the Washington Post (3/27, Heubusch) that "opioid prescriptions have shrunk substantially" in recent years amid government pressure, but "in a bitter irony, opioid overdose deaths continue to hover at an all-time high. Many chronic pain patients, denied prescriptions, are self-medicating on the street," and "some who have lost all hope for pain relief are choosing to end their pain by ending it all. The risk of suicide among patients with chronic pain is twice that of those without it." Heubusch argues that though the government "can regulate prescriptions for those in need, it cannot regulate pain."

Investigators Tackle Connecticut Cold Cases.

The Connecticut Post   (3/27, Backus) reports, “As a former supervisor with the Chief State’s Attorney’s Cold Case Unit, Patrick Griffin understands the heartache the families of murder victims suffer when a case goes cold,” so “when he was appointed as the State’s Attorney for the Judicial District of New Haven in 2016, he formed his own cold case unit for the municipalities the New Haven courthouse serves.” The “group made its first arrest last July, charging Christopher Calhoun with the 2011 New Haven shooting death of Isaiah Gantt. ‘That’s one case that would have never been solved,’ Griffin said.” Chief State’s Attorney Kevin Kane “estimates there are 1,500 to 2,000 unsolved homicides in the state that date back to the late 1970s and early 1980s.”

New Zealand Police Probe Fake Online Submissions For Handing In Guns.

MSN \(NZL\)   (3/26) reports, “Police are investigating a rash of fake submissions on an online form to hand in firearms which are being banned in the wake of the Christchurch mosque attacks.” The online form “for owners to declare their intention to hand in guns was spammed with false notifications on Friday.” MSN adds, “Some forms were reportedly submitted by gun lobbyists apparently trying to interfere with the process for handing in firearms.” Police “blocked the online form to foreign users on Friday, and Assistant Commissioner Tusha Penny said the High Tech Crime Unit was investigating.”

Facebook To Ban White Nationalist Content.

The New York Times   (3/27, Stack) reports “Facebook said on Wednesday that it would ban white nationalist content from its platforms, a significant policy change that bows to longstanding demands from civil rights groups who said the tech giant was failing to confront the powerful reach of white extremism on social media.” The Times adds “the company had previously banned white supremacist content from its platforms but maintained a murky distinction between white supremacy, white nationalism and white separatism.” Yesterday, “it said that its views had been changed by civil society groups and experts in race relations and that it now believed ‘white nationalism and separatism cannot be meaningfully separated from white supremacy and organized hate groups.’”

Reuters   (3/27) reports, “Civil rights groups have said social media giants have failed to confront extremism and that was under the spotlight this month after a suspected white supremacist broadcast live footage of his attacks in Christchurch, New Zealand.” Facebook, Twitter Inc and Alphabet Inc’s YouTube “have been under pressure to remove white supremacist and neo-Nazi content from their platforms, along with fake news and other types of abusive posts,” and “in response, Facebook has beefed up its content monitoring teams and taken down event pages that were used to promote and organize rallies by white supremacist groups.”

The Wall Street Journal   (3/27, Thomas, Subscription Publication), among other news outlets, also reports the story.

New Zealand Police Investigate Whether Man Who Died In Standoff Was Linked To Mosque Attacks.

Reuters   (3/27) reports, “New Zealand police are investigating whether a man who died from a stab wound in a standoff on Wednesday had any connection with the March 15 shooting attack on two mosques in Christchurch, which killed 50 people.” According to Reuters, “National police commissioner Mike Bush said Christchurch police found several firearms in a search of a local property late Tuesday evening,” and “at about 12.30 a.m. on Wednesday, they located a 54 year-old man sought in relation to the firearms in a stopped vehicle.” Police negotiators “spoke with the man over a number of hours and officers approached the vehicle at around 3.40 a.m.,” and Bush “said the man was found in the car critically injured with what appeared to be a stab wound. A knife was located in the vehicle.”

Austrian Police Arrest Iraqi Over German Train Attacks.

The AP   (3/27) reports from Berlin, “Austrian authorities have arrested an Iraqi man suspected of carrying out unsuccessful attacks on trains in neighboring Germany last year and sympathizing with the Islamic State group, officials in the two countries said Wednesday.” According to the AP, “The 42-year-old was arrested on Monday in Vienna, where he lives.” Vienna prosecutors “said he is suspected of ‘carrying out terrorist attacks on railway lines in Germany in October and December 2018.’” In October, “a high-speed train hit a steel cable stretched over the tracks between electrification masts on the Nuremberg-Munich line,” and “an Arabic-language note, which investigators have described as threatening but unspecific, was found nearby as well as other documents suggesting a link to IS.”

Massachusetts Court Rules Police Can Look Into GPS Tracking Records Of Probationers.

The Boston Globe   (3/26, Ellement) reports, "Police trying to solve a crime are free to tap into the database of the state probation department's GPS monitoring system to look at probationers' location information, the state's highest court ruled Tuesday." According to the Globe, "In a 6-1 decision, the Supreme Judicial Court declared that data archived by the department – which includes minute-by-minute information on a person's location – is the equivalent of a public record that police can access without a search warrant." The Globe adds, "Ruling in the case of Jamie B. Johnson, who became a suspect in a 2012 Marshfield house break-in one year after the crime, the majority said Johnson knew his movements could be tracked when he agreed to start wearing the GPS device in order to stay out of prison," and that "moreover, Justice Scott L. Kafker wrote for the majority that Johnson, under the state constitution, had no expectation of privacy for the data."

Federal Ban On Bump Stocks Now In Place.

USA Today   (3/26, Crocker, Penzenstadler) reports that "Owning, buying, selling, or otherwise transferring a bump stock, a device that allows rifles to mimic automatic weapons, [became] illegal Tuesday, when a federal ban goes into effect." After the October 2017 Las Vegas mass shooting, President Trump "instructed the attorney general to regulate their use." The Justice Department issued the ban last December, and gave individuals "90 days to either turn bump stocks over to federal agents or melt, shred or crush them."

Proposal To Arm Teachers Advances In Florida Legislature.

The South Florida Sun Sentinel   (3/25, Swisher) reports, "A proposal to arm teachers advanced along party lines in the Florida Senate Tuesday, despite opposition from students and educators who say it won't make schools safer and could put children in harm's way." According to the Sun Sentinel, "A Senate panel approved the measure in a 5-3 vote – just over a year after a gunman opened fired at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland and killed 17 students and staff." Teachers "would be allowed to voluntarily carry guns if they complete training and local school boards agree."

Texas Police Groups Decry Push To Decriminalize Marijuana.

The Houston Chronicle   (3/26, Goldenstein) reports, "Two major Texas law enforcement groups on Tuesday decried pending legislation to loosen marijuana laws as the beginning of a 'slippery slope' into full legalization of the drug. 'The blueprint for the proponents of marijuana legalization is clear and has been effectively used in other states,' Grand Prairie Police Chief Scott Dye said. 'This is a calculated and systematic approach by a minority of our population who use marijuana and/or stand to gain from marijuana production.'" Dye "and other law enforcement officials representing the Texas Police Chiefs Association and the Sheriffs' Association of Texas said legalization would bring increased crime, entice a dangerous black market and lead to increased use of other, more addictive drugs." The groups "urged the Texas Legislature not to lower criminal penalties for possession of small amounts of marijuana, which is now punishable by up to six months in jail."

Plotting Terrorist Attacks Would Become A State Crime In South Carolina Under House-Passed Bill.

The Charleston \(SC\) Post and Courier   (3/26, Adcox) reports from Columbia, South Carolina, "Supporting terrorism would become a state crime under legislation approved Tuesday by the S.C. House, which its backers say could have kept a Ladson man who pledged allegiance to the Islamic State locked up years before he pleaded guilty to a federal charge." According to the Post and Courier, "If it had been a state law in 2015, then-York high school student Zakaryia Abdel Abdin could have been charged with something more than illegal gun possession when an arrest revealed a plot to rob a gun store and attack military bases." The Post and Courier adds, "While terrorism is a state crime, plotting to commit terrorism is not, and federal authorities didn't want to pursue a case against the juvenile in 2015, said the former solicitor for York and Union counties."

Expanded Mississippi Terrorism Threats Law To Take Effect July 1.

The Jackson \(MS\) Clarion Ledger   (3/26, Gates) reports, "In January, bomb threats were made to three schools in Holmes County." An 18-year-old "was charged with making a false report of an explosive," but, "come July 1, an individual making a bomb threat against places with a group of people could face Mississippi's new terroristic threats law." According to the Clarion Ledger, "Most of those charged now face up to a year in county jail for a misdemeanor and a year or more in prison for a felony conviction," and "the new law will make it a felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison."

Senate Republicans Open To Gun Violence “Red Flag” Bills.

Politico   (3/26, Levine) reports that on Tuesday, Senate Republicans appeared open to “red flag bills to address gun violence.” However, “broader federal legislation was off the table.” The red flag laws “allow police and family members to petition a court to temporarily restrict access to firearms for people who could be an imminent threat to others or to themselves.” Speaking on the issue of gun violence, Lindsey Graham, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman, stated, “I think that’s the best way at least initially to solve this problem.”

CRIME & DRUGS

Marijuana Legalization Caused Uptick In ER Visits In Colorado.

MassLive   (3/26) reports that “Five years after Colorado first legalized marijuana, a new study shows pot’s bad effects are sending more people to the emergency room.” The study indicated that both inhaled and edible marijuana caused issues, with patients visiting the ER “with symptoms such as repeated vomiting, racing hearts and psychotic episodes.” According to the lead author of the study, Dr. Andrew Monte, the cases are “not enough to swamp the emergency department... but it stresses an already burdened system.”

West Virginia Drug Bust Nets 33 Arrests.

The Martinsburg \(WV\) Journal   (3/26) reports, “A federal grand jury has indicted 33 individuals for their alleged involvement in distributing heroin, cocaine and fentanyl throughout Berkeley and Jefferson counties, U.S. Attorney Bill Powell said in a press release.” According to the Journal, “Known as ‘Operation Triple Crown,’ agents seized 891 grams of different controlled substances, several firearms, ammunition and more than $33,000 in cash during several raids and searches conducted in West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania in January, according to the press release.”

Prosecutors Say Eight Los Angeles County Men Ran Darknet Drug Rings.

The Los Angeles Times   (3/26, Fry) reports, “Eight Los Angeles County men are facing federal conspiracy charges alleging that they are behind two trafficking rings that sold drugs over the so-called darknet and shipped them across the country inside stuffed animals and other children’s toys.” The men “ran a drug trafficking organization called Drugpharmacist that peddled methamphetamine, heroin, cocaine and crack cocaine on two darknet marketplaces.” The US Postal Inspection Service and FBI began their investigation last June.

North Carolina Manhunt Continues, One Inmate Still At Large.

NPR   (3/26, Schwartz) reports, “Four of five inmates who broke out of a North Carolina jail have been captured by authorities, but one of them remained at large Tuesday morning.” The five men “forced their way through a fence in the exercise yard of the Nash County Detention Center, about 45 miles east of Raleigh, on Monday afternoon.” The men “had been convicted of various charges including possession of a stolen vehicle, drug possession, and assault by strangulation.” The FBI is participating in the search.

POLICING & POLICY

Massachusetts Court Rules Police Can Look Into GPS Tracking Records Of Probationers.

The Boston Globe   (3/26, Ellement) reports, "Police trying to solve a crime are free to tap into the database of the state probation department's GPS monitoring system to look at probationers' location information, the state's highest court ruled Tuesday." According to the Globe, "In a 6-1 decision, the Supreme Judicial Court declared that data archived by the department – which includes minute-by-minute information on a person's location – is the equivalent of a public record that police can access without a search warrant." The Globe adds, "Ruling in the case of Jamie B. Johnson, who became a suspect in a 2012 Marshfield house break-in one year after the crime, the majority said Johnson knew his movements could be tracked when he agreed to start wearing the GPS device in order to stay out of prison," and that "moreover, Justice Scott L. Kafker wrote for the majority that Johnson, under the state constitution, had no expectation of privacy for the data."

Federal Ban On Bump Stocks Now In Place.

USA Today   (3/26, Crocker, Penzenstadler) reports that "Owning, buying, selling, or otherwise transferring a bump stock, a device that allows rifles to mimic automatic weapons, [became] illegal Tuesday, when a federal ban goes into effect." After the October 2017 Las Vegas mass shooting, President Trump "instructed the attorney general to regulate their use." The Justice Department issued the ban last December, and gave individuals "90 days to either turn bump stocks over to federal agents or melt, shred or crush them."

Proposal To Arm Teachers Advances In Florida Legislature.

The South Florida Sun Sentinel   (3/25, Swisher) reports, "A proposal to arm teachers advanced along party lines in the Florida Senate Tuesday, despite opposition from students and educators who say it won't make schools safer and could put children in harm's way." According to the Sun Sentinel, "A Senate panel approved the measure in a 5-3 vote – just over a year after a gunman opened fired at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland and killed 17 students and staff." Teachers "would be allowed to voluntarily carry guns if they complete training and local school boards agree."

Texas Police Groups Decry Push To Decriminalize Marijuana.

The Houston Chronicle   (3/26, Goldenstein) reports, "Two major Texas law enforcement groups on Tuesday decried pending legislation to loosen marijuana laws as the beginning of a 'slippery slope' into full legalization of the drug. 'The blueprint for the proponents of marijuana legalization is clear and has been effectively used in other states,' Grand Prairie Police Chief Scott Dye said. 'This is a calculated and systematic approach by a minority of our population who use marijuana and/or stand to gain from marijuana production.'" Dye "and other law enforcement officials representing the Texas Police Chiefs Association and the Sheriffs' Association of Texas said legalization would bring increased crime, entice a dangerous black market and lead to increased use of other, more addictive drugs." The groups "urged the Texas Legislature not to lower criminal penalties for possession of small amounts of marijuana, which is now punishable by up to six months in jail."

Plotting Terrorist Attacks Would Become A State Crime In South Carolina Under House-Passed Bill.

The Charleston \(SC\) Post and Courier   (3/26, Adcox) reports from Columbia, South Carolina, "Supporting terrorism would become a state crime under legislation approved Tuesday by the S.C. House, which its backers say could have kept a Ladson man who pledged allegiance to the Islamic State locked up years before he pleaded guilty to a federal charge." According to the Post and Courier, "If it had been a state law in 2015, then-York high school student Zakaryia Abdel Abdin could have been charged with something more than illegal gun possession when an arrest revealed a plot to rob a gun store and attack military bases." The Post and Courier adds, "While terrorism is a state crime, plotting to commit terrorism is not, and federal authorities didn't want to pursue a case against the juvenile in 2015, said the former solicitor for York and Union counties."

Expanded Mississippi Terrorism Threats Law To Take Effect July 1.

The Jackson \(MS\) Clarion Ledger   (3/26, Gates) reports, "In January, bomb threats were made to three schools in Holmes County." An 18-year-old "was charged with making a false report of an explosive," but, "come July 1, an individual making a bomb threat against places with a group of people could face Mississippi's new terroristic threats law." According to the Clarion Ledger, "Most of those charged now face up to a year in county jail for a misdemeanor and a year or more in prison for a felony conviction," and "the new law will make it a felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison."

Senate Republicans Open To Gun Violence “Red Flag” Bills.

Politico   (3/26, Levine) reports that on Tuesday, Senate Republicans appeared open to “red flag bills to address gun violence.” However, “broader federal legislation was off the table.” The red flag laws “allow police and family members to petition a court to temporarily restrict access to firearms for people who could be an imminent threat to others or to themselves.” Speaking on the issue of gun violence, Lindsey Graham, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman, stated, “I think that’s the best way at least initially to solve this problem.”

CRIME & DRUGS

Marijuana Legalization Caused Uptick In ER Visits In Colorado.

MassLive   (3/26) reports that “Five years after Colorado first legalized marijuana, a new study shows pot’s bad effects are sending more people to the emergency room.” The study indicated that both inhaled and edible marijuana caused issues, with patients visiting the ER “with symptoms such as repeated vomiting, racing hearts and psychotic episodes.” According to the lead author of the study, Dr. Andrew Monte, the cases are “not enough to swamp the emergency department... but it stresses an already burdened system.”

West Virginia Drug Bust Nets 33 Arrests.

The Martinsburg \(WV\) Journal   (3/26) reports, “A federal grand jury has indicted 33 individuals for their alleged involvement in distributing heroin, cocaine and fentanyl throughout Berkeley and Jefferson counties, U.S. Attorney Bill Powell said in a press release.” According to the Journal, “Known as ‘Operation Triple Crown,’ agents seized 891 grams of different controlled substances, several firearms, ammunition and more than $33,000 in cash during several raids and searches conducted in West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania in January, according to the press release.”

Prosecutors Say Eight Los Angeles County Men Ran Darknet Drug Rings.

The Los Angeles Times   (3/26, Fry) reports, “Eight Los Angeles County men are facing federal conspiracy charges alleging that they are behind two trafficking rings that sold drugs over the so-called darknet and shipped them across the country inside stuffed animals and other children’s toys.” The men “ran a drug trafficking organization called Drugpharmacist that peddled methamphetamine, heroin, cocaine and crack cocaine on two darknet marketplaces.” The US Postal Inspection Service and FBI began their investigation last June.

North Carolina Manhunt Continues, One Inmate Still At Large.

NPR   (3/26, Schwartz) reports, “Four of five inmates who broke out of a North Carolina jail have been captured by authorities, but one of them remained at large Tuesday morning.” The five men “forced their way through a fence in the exercise yard of the Nash County Detention Center, about 45 miles east of Raleigh, on Monday afternoon.” The men “had been convicted of various charges including possession of a stolen vehicle, drug possession, and assault by strangulation.” The FBI is participating in the search.

The Marijuana Report

Marijuana News Based on Science, Not Spin 3.13.2019

CBD Oil is everywhere, but is it really safe and healthy?

Time asked this question of two scientists who are studying cannabidiol (CBD). Their answer? With one exception, no one knows.

Dr. Esther Blessing, associate professor of psychiatry at New York University, and Margaret Haney, professor of neurobiology at Columbia University Medical Center and director of the university's Marijuana Research Laboratory, agree that CBD may one day be used to treat certain illnesses. Last summer, the Food and Drug Administration approved a purified form of CBD, Epidiolex, to treat rare forms of epilepsy.

But the scientists warn that most research on CBD is in the earliest stages, and we don't know much about it, including what its long-term effects might be.

They stress the CBD available almost everywhere is not regulated by the government, which means it might contain other ingredients – or no CBD at all. Dr. Haney warns that much of the CBD on the market could be “snake oil.”

CBD can be extracted from the marijuana plant or the hemp plant, which is also marijuana but contains no more than three-tenths of one percent THC. Congress legalized hemp last December, but not marijuana.

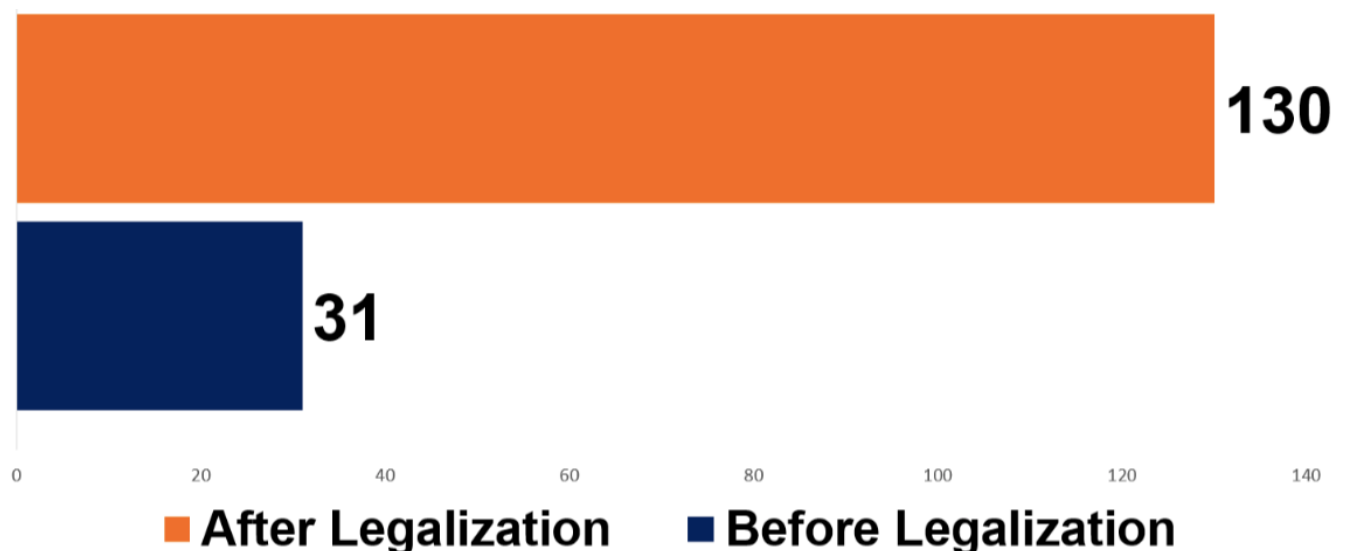

CBD is being studied in early clinical trials for treating post-traumatic stress disorder and schizophrenia. Other evidence suggests it may reduce anxiety, but again, it is in very early stages of testing, says Dr. Blessing.

Dr. Haney says CBD may also treat cognitive symptoms associated with HIV and Alzheimer's and neuropathic pain, but that not enough is known right now about how CBD acts on the brain, its impact on brain development, or the effects of long-term use.

She warns that the medical claims marketers make for CBD “are not based on science,” adding that people should approach CBD with skepticism. “Because it's not regulated, nobody is really checking what it contains,” she says. “There is no source of CBD I can recommend.”

Unintentional pediatric marijuana exposures prior to and after legalization and commercial availability of recreational marijuana in Washington State

Researchers from Washington State, Colorado, and Pennsylvania studied unintentional pediatric marijuana exposures reported to the Washington Poison Center before and after the state legalized marijuana for recreational use.

Data from children age 9 or younger were included in the study. Between July 2010 and July 2016, there were 161 cases. Of these, 130 (81 percent) occurred in the period after legalization. The median age of exposed children was two years.

Monthly exposures increased after November 2012 when the drug was legalized and increased even more after marijuana became available in stores in July 2014.

Recreational marijuana: What schools fear most about the legalization in New York

A powerful opponent of marijuana legalization in New York is the state Parent Teacher Association.

Kyle Belokopitsky, president of the state association, says parents and schools see the subject as a child welfare issue and are concerned about the impact of legalization on students already enticed by vaping, cigarettes, and opioids.

“As a society, we’ve been unable to stop the things we seem to think are legally allowable for adults from filtering down to children,” said David Little, executive director of the state Rural Schools Association.

“And yet somehow we seem to be marching ahead with the legalization of marijuana without factoring in the societal effects it will have when kids start using it and the implication that it’s legal so it must be okay,” he continued.

Ms. Belokopitsky asks New Yorkers to consider what will happen if the drug is legalized and school bus drivers can legally use marijuana. “It stays in the system long after use,” she says.

Police officers say legalization will be an enforcement nightmare for them and would lead to more impaired drivers on the roads. School officials agree and have joined forces with law enforcement to oppose legalization.

This long Lohud (part of the USA Today network) article presents the points of view of many players in the debate. It can be read here.

Sweet smell of success? Big business bets on a marijuana boom

"To listen to some of the predictions about the future of the cannabis industry, you would think financial analysts had been partaking heavily of the product," notes The Guardian. Some estimate that the marijuana industry could be worth $500 billion to $1 trillion.

As hallucinatory as that sounds, however, big businesses are rushing to get involved. Canada's Canopy Growth recently announced a partnership with lifestyle maven Martha Stewart to promote CBD. The strength of her brand indicates that marijuana products are "infiltrating respectable American households," the article contends.

Altria, maker of Marlboro cigarettes, paid $1.8 billion last December for 45 percent of another Canadian company, Chronos.

ABInBev, which makes Budweiser, invested $50 million in Tilray, a Canadian marijuana company that was incorporated in the US, to research weed-infused beverages.

All are positioned to jump into the US if marijuana is legalized nationwide.

A new entrant into the market is Jacana, whose owner, Alexandra Chong, Tommy Chong's daughter, is pictured above. The company grows marijuana in Jamaica. It recently raised $20 million from venture capitalists and has already exported two shipments to Canada, with plans to export marijuana for medical use to the rest of the world, including Britain.

Britain is about to welcome its first operating company to produce marijuana for medical use. Spinnaker Opportunities plans to buy Kanabo, a research company focused on cannabis oil, medically approved vaporizers, and marijuana cultivation.

"It's an industry (recreational marijuana) that could rival tobacco and alcohol in terms of its impact in the world," says Spinnaker's chairman, Andy Morrison.

If a majority of Americans want pot legalized, why are so many local communities banning it?

WXYZ Detroit has published a list of more than 200 communities that will not allow marijuana businesses in their areas. And this is a year before the regulations will be determined and stores start opening up across the state.

The ABC-TV affiliate published a list and plans to update it each time the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs adds to it.

Towns and cities in 70 of the state's 83 counties have notified the department they will not allow the marijuana industry to conduct business within their borders.

Cannabis drinks confront a serious buzz kill – they taste terrible

Upstart companies tinker with ways to dial down “oily grass” flavors and notes of dish soap, urine

“Cannabis drinks are hitting the market, promising anxiety reduction, pain relief, and better sleep,” says the Wall Street Journal. “One thing none of them tout is taste.”

That’s because the oily based extracts from the plant don’t mix well with water. One advocate says the taste is like a barnyard. “The oil tastes terrible, and it floats. It’s very grassy and very funky,” he says.

One company, Trait Bioscience, uses an objective rating system by a panel of tasters to help identify flavors and scents they want to keep, such as blueberry, while eliminating less pleasant tastes such as dirty socks.

Undeterred by the taste problem, Anheuser-Busch InBev SA, Molson Coors Brewing Co., and Corona maker Constellations Brands have formed partnerships with Canadian marijuana companies to develop weed-intoxicating beverages and non-intoxicating “health” drinks.

Constellation’s chief executive, Bill Newlands, predicts the global marijuana market could eventually top the $100 billion annual US market for beer.

As cannabis legalization heats up across the country, the United States' newest regulated industry (at least in half the states) is at a dynamic and critical juncture that requires solid legal advice and services. In this seminar, attorneys will be provided a top down look at the issues facing the country as more states begin to offer commercial cannabis opportunities including federal enforcement priorities and policies, brand protections, as well as an in depth look at our country's largest regulated market – California, as it navigates the turbulent waters of implementing its new regulations and policies for this emerging market. Read More

Key topics to be discussed:

- Changes at the Federal Level
- What Losing the Cole Memo Means
- The REFER Act of 2018
- Update: The Respect State Marijuana Laws Act
- Changes to California Marijuana Laws
- States Considering Marijuana Legalization This Year
- Cannabis branding
- The challenges of protecting IP marks at the federal level
- The benefits of state level IP protection
- Interstate brand licensing

Counting on the Subway to Arrive on Time? Why the Numbered Lines Do Best

By AZI PAYBARAH

It's Friday.

TODAY IN NEW YORK, NY

Winds becoming strong; mainly cloudy

 43°F 49° 34°

TOMORROW:  48° 35°

Weather: Friday may be wet. Expect sprinkles throughout the day, strong winds in the afternoon and a high near 50. Saturday may feel chilly. Sunday will be warmer.

Alternate-side parking: In effect until April (Holy Thursday).

Hiroko Masuike/The New York Times

The city's subway trains are arriving on time more often, yet riders might be noticing an unusual divide in the system. The numbered lines are performing better than the lettered ones.

To get a sense of why this is happening, I talked to my colleague Emma G. Fitzsimmons, a transit reporter.

Why New York's [lettered subway lines are "cursed."]

How are the trains performing?

In 2017, less than 65 percent of trains were on time — the worst of any major transit system in the world, Ms. Fitzsimmons has reported. This year, that improved to 76 percent.

But there was a twist: The seven numbered trains were outperforming the 15 lettered trains. Seventy-nine percent of numbered trains were on time, compared with 68 percent of lettered trains.

Why are numbered trains doing better?

Subway leaders cite several reasons:

- Schedule changes on the numbered lines improved the on-time rate.
- A computer system on the numbered lines allows workers to more efficiently dispatch trains.
- The opening of the Second Avenue subway eased crowding on several numbered lines, and signal upgrades improved service on another numbered line.

Is there one thing that can improve all trains?

Modern signals are the No. 1 solution, Ms. Fitzsimmons said.

The subway system's chief, Andy Byford, wants to install these signals on all the lines, but that takes time and costs billions. He hasn't secured the funding from state lawmakers (yet).

The subway system also needs new train cars. Trains on the C line are the oldest in daily operation in the world, according to Metropolitan Transportation Authority officials.

Do affluent neighborhoods have better trains?

Not necessarily. The F train goes through Park Slope and other wealthy neighborhoods in Brooklyn, and it has really terrible service. The on-time rate is about 50 percent — the lowest in the city.

One reason I left Park Slope was because I didn't want to live on the F train. I now ride the A train in Washington Heights, and it's a much better experience.

Why were the lines assigned certain letters and numbers?

Three competing systems were built throughout the city.

- The Interborough Rapid Transit Company built the trains that are numbered.

- The Independent System included what are now the A, C, D, E, F, G, R and Q lines.
- The Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation included what are now the B, J, M, N, Z and L lines.

The companies were merged in 1953. (The W line was created in 2001.)

And finally: A coffee and tea festival

Instead of the Big Apple, maybe New York should be called Bean Town.

In 1994, Starbucks opened its first coffee shop in New York City. It was at 87th Street and Broadway.

Ten years after the company's debut here, the city's Independent Budget Office determined that New Yorkers were downing so many lattes that if it taxed that coffee drink, it would generate \$12 million in revenue.

So it really is no wonder that Starbucks, which was founded in Seattle, wrote on its website that "New York is America's original coffee town."

All that coffee enthusiasm may help explain why the Coffee and Tea Festival in New York City outgrew the small Manhattan venue where it was first held 14 years ago.

This weekend, the festival will be at the Brooklyn Expo Center in Greenpoint and will include seminars about Ethiopian coffee, "online tea matchmaking" and Italian iced coffee and tea. (Find out more on the festival's website.)

Kristyn Noren, who worked at a Starbucks for seven years, said that by her estimate New York is "one of the most caffeinated cities in America."

Mr. Noren knows beverages. She is the director of event marketing and sales for the festival, as well as the editor of Hard Cider News.

She prefers her coffee black, preferably iced.

So, which New York City coffee spot is her favorite?

"Working with so many different coffee companies, I really can't have a favorite," she said.

It's Friday — drink up!

Metropolitan Diary: Hitchin' a ride

Dear Diary:

It was raining as I zoomed down the street on my longboard. The station was 11 blocks away, and the train I wanted to catch would be leaving in five minutes. I didn't like my odds.

Just as my leg began to tire out from pushing, a small sedan turned the corner behind me and began to trail me. I swerved to the side of the street to make space for the car to drive by.

After speeding up, the car slowed down once it came even with me. The window rolled down, and a young guy wearing a Yankees cap poked out his head.

“Where you off to?” he asked as we cruised along parallel to each other.

“L.I.R.R.,” I said between breaths. “Queens Village Station.”

He grinned.

“Grab on.”

I smiled, grabbed onto the window and felt my wheels scream as he picked up speed.

How the Superrich Leave Their Mark on New York

By AZI PAYBARAH

It's Tuesday.

TODAY IN NEW YORK, NY

Sunshine and patchy clouds; breezy

 36°F 44° 30°

TOMORROW:  47° 38°

Weather: Sunny skies. The temperatures will get into the mid-40s, but the windchill may have you reaching for a scarf.

Alternate-side parking: In effect until March 21 (Purim).

Holly Pickett for The New York Times

The real estate mogul Harry Macklowe erected 42-foot-tall photographs of himself and his new wife on a Park Avenue building last week for the whole world — including his ex-wife, who lives nearby — to see.

his ex-wife, who lives nearby — to see.

It was the latest example of how New York has been uniquely shaped by the idiosyncrasies of the superrich.

Sometimes the results, like vanity addresses on buildings, are seemingly harmless. Other times, they have changed how New York looks and feels.

Here are a few other instances:

Stephen A. Schwarzman's library

In 2008, the Wall Street financier Stephen A. Schwarzman donated $100 million to the New York Public Library on Fifth Avenue, resulting in his name's being inscribed on the building five times. Soon it will be six.

Robert Moses' two-mile detour

The Northern State Parkway on Long Island bypasses the neighborhood of Wheatley Hills because, according to the historian Robert Caro, very rich residents persuaded the master builder Robert Moses to redesign his roadway plans.

Barry Diller's park

Chang W. Lee/The New York Times

Initially, the plan for a new park on the West Side of Manhattan was modest, and the billionaire Barry Diller was tapped to help fund it. “He embraced the notion, but brought in his own experts and commissioned a space age structure,” The New York Times reported in 2017.

Before Mr. Diller got involved, the park was projected to cost $35 million; its budget has since ballooned to $250 million.

Jeff Bezos' planned helipad

When Amazon was looking to open a major campus, Governor Cuomo and Mayor de Blasio lured it with nearly $3 billion in tax incentives and waterfront property in Long Island City. “They even agreed to allow a helipad for Jeff Bezos, Amazon’s chief executive,” The Times’s J. David Goodman reported last year. (Could you imagine him taking the 7 train?)

The company eventually backed out of the whole deal because of local opposition.

Donald J. Trump’s properties

Of course, this list wouldn’t be complete without mentioning Donald J. Trump, whose eponymous developments proliferated throughout New York City for decades before he became president. Even Wollman Rink in Central Park has the Trump name on it.

Since the 2016 election, there has been a push to strip his name from some buildings and even a state park.

Know of any other examples? Email us at nytoday@nytimes.com.

And finally: 200 years of bicycling

Illustrator: J.M. Gleeson, private collection

It’s hard to overstate the revolutionary impact that bicycles have had on mankind.

Paved roads were made for cyclists, not drivers, one author has argued.

The Times’s Natalie Angier wrote, “Bicycles also gave birth to our national highway system.” And Ms. Angier also noted that suffragist Susan B. Anthony said, “I think it has done more to emancipate women than any one thing in the world.”

There are, of course, more recent examples of the impact of bicycles.

In 2008, an East Harlem resident, Dulcie Canton, had not just one but half a dozen jobs: dog-walking, cat-sitting, fine-arts modeling, coffee shop barista, just to name a few. And she biked to each of them. Why? “I was struggling to make MetroCard money,” she said in a recent interview.

“I thought of cycling as a way to save money, going to my gigs,” Ms. Dulcie said. Besides, she added, “mass transit is crazy.”

So, she hopped on her bike and rode. Later, Ms. Canton connected with other female cyclists of color through groups like Black Girls Do Bike and Brown Bike Girl. “I felt like I found my family,” she said.

Ms. Dulcie now works as the Brooklyn organizer for Transportation Alternatives, an advocacy group that promotes bicycle and pedestrian-friendly policies.

The “first human-powered two-wheeled machines,” debuted in New York in 1819, according to a news release from the Museum of the City of New York. Those machines did not have pedals, and riders mainly coasted. Those machines were called velocipedes.

Bicycles have evolved a lot since then.

On Thursday, the museum will open the exhibit “Cycling in the City: A 200-Year History.” It will explore the history and cultures of cycling, as well as the machines themselves. The exhibit includes 150 objects, 14 bicycles and three stationary bicycles.

The exhibit runs (or rides!) through Oct. 6.

Metropolitan Diary: Smoothie showdown

Dear Diary:

I was stepping up to order at Planet Smoothie in Penn Station when a man who had just gotten a smoothie stomped back to the counter.

“What’s in this?” he said.

The cashier looked nonplused.

“Which one did you order, again?” he said.

The man waved at the board on the wall. The cashier continued to have a nervous look on his face.

“It looks like strawberries, blueberries, nonfat yogurt,” he said.

“I can read,” the man said. “But it doesn’t taste like it.”

The people waiting behind me began to shuffle impatiently. The cashier shrugged and shifted his feet. Two other employees moved in closer. I started contemplating whether a smoothie was worth waiting out this scene for.

“I can make you another one if you like?” the cashier said.

There was a pause.

“Nope, that’s all right, it’s good,” the man said. “I like it, and I was just hoping for the recipe to make it at home.”

What's the Deal With Marijuana Legalization in N.Y. and N.J.?

By AZI PAYBARAH

It's Wednesday.

TODAY IN NEW YORK, NY

Sunshine mixing with some clouds

☾ 34°F 49° 40°

TOMORROW: ☁ 56° 50°

Weather: A day that starts crisp, then warms to near 50, but with gathering clouds.

Alternate-side parking: In effect until March 21 (Purim).

Bryan Anselm for The New York Times

Ten states and the District of Columbia have legalized recreational marijuana. Now New York and New Jersey could join them.

In New York, there is widespread support among lawmakers to legalize marijuana, but there is a complex debate over how exactly to do it.

In New Jersey, lawmakers may vote on the issue this month, according to a deal announced Tuesday.

What's the status of marijuana?

- New York: Marijuana possession was decriminalized in 1977, but arrests for having small amounts of it continued for decades. Medical marijuana has been legal since 2014.
- New Jersey: The state has not decriminalized the drug. Medical marijuana has been legal since 2010.

When could things change?

- New York: Not in the next few months. Governor Cuomo wanted to include legalization in the state budget in April but recently acknowledged that he was likely to miss that deadline.

Black lawmakers want assurances that money from the potentially $3 billion industry would benefit communities disproportionately affected by the war on drugs.

- New Jersey: Gov. Philip D. Murphy said Tuesday that his “best guess” was that legal marijuana sales would begin early next year.

Who are the crucial players?

- New York: The main fight is not about whether to legalize marijuana, but how. Shaping that debate are people like the Assembly majority leader, Crystal Peoples-Stokes of Buffalo. She wants a guarantee that people of color will receive licenses to sell marijuana. She also wants a plan for how revenue from sales will be reinvested in minority communities.

New Jersey: The governor and two legislative leaders, all Democrats, have a broad compromise to legalize the drug, expunge some drug-related criminal records and help incentivize businesses owned by people of color.

Craig Coughlin, the Assembly speaker, said he had the votes to pass a bill. Stephen Sweeney, the State Senate president, has said he was short some votes.

Who will profit?

- New York: Legalization could yield $772 million in tax revenue for the city and state annually, according to the New York City comptroller, Scott Stringer. A top aide to Mr. Cuomo said details about who would get access to licenses, and how the state would spend revenue from the industry, should be written into regulations after legalization takes place.
- New Jersey: The state estimated that it could bring in $210 million in state taxes annually.

What is the downside?

Marijuana may not be as safe as proponents claim. County health departments across New York oppose legalization.

Alex Berenson, a former Times reporter who recently published a book about the drug's effects, said marijuana was more powerful today than in the past. He likened the question of legalization to a debate decades ago in which some experts did not discourage the use of opioids.

What about Connecticut?

- Marijuana was decriminalized in 2011. Medical marijuana was legalized in 2012.
- “There is more momentum than ever” to pass legislation, according to The Hartford Courant, though some police officials, clergy members and lawmakers are opposed.

Nick Corasaniti contributed reporting.

Guilty plea in Uber kidnapping

The woman called an Uber car last year to take her to White Plains from Manhattan. She fell asleep in the back seat.

She woke to discover that the car had stopped and that the driver was in the back seat with her, his hand touching her breast, prosecutors said.

He eventually left her on the side of a highway in Connecticut.

The driver, Harbir Parmar, 25, of Queens, pleaded guilty this week to kidnapping and wire fraud. He could face life in prison when he is sentenced in United States District Court in June.

And finally: Oops! The theater did it again

Steve Marcus/Las Vegas Sun, via Associated Press

“Beautiful: The Carole King Musical” is on Broadway. So is “Ain’t Too Proud — The Life and Times of the Temptations” and “The Cher Show.”

Shortly, musicals will feature hits by Alanis Morissette and Tina Turner.

Britney Spears could soon join the list.

“Once Upon a One More Time,” which features 23 songs from Ms. Spears, is set to run this fall in Chicago. Its creators are then likely to seek a spot on Broadway, my colleague Michael Paulson reported.

The show, Mr. Paulson wrote, “will not be about Ms. Spears’s life (which has not been a fairy tale),” but about a book club whose members include Snow White, Cinderella, Rapunzel and Sleeping Beauty.

After the women wish for new reading material, a fairy godmother brings “The Feminine Mystique.”

Cue the pop music.

It’s Wednesday — your playlist today could be Broadway’s soundtrack tomorrow.

Metropolitan Diary: Fifth Avenue, 1968

Dear Diary:

It was spring 1968, and my classes at Columbia University had been suspended because of student protests. I had also just quit my part-time job as the social secretary for a wealthy older man. He was not giving me enough hours for me to survive in New York.

So it was with a “What do I do now?” feeling that I decided to walk from near Central Park down Fifth Avenue toward 34th Street, where I had plans to meet friends for dinner.

I took my time, stopping to gaze in the store windows. One was a framing and print shop. I was startled when an older man who had apparently been watching me from inside knocked on the window. Before I knew it, he had come outside and was talking with me.

He said I looked a bit down. I told him I had just quit my job. He commiserated with me. He told me he had just broken up with his girlfriend. I commiserated with him

“Let me take you to lunch,” he said. His favorite restaurant was not far away. Since I had nothing to do until dinner, I agreed.

We had a wonderful lunch, and the conversation never stopped. It was as if we were two old friends.

We returned to the shop and he invited me in. He sorted through some drawers and boxes, and then he handed me two beautiful small wooden frames. He insisted on wrapping them before I went on my way.

I left the city that summer to get on with my life. The frames have housed two lovely paintings for 50 years. When I look at them, they evoke a crystal clear memory of my lunch with a stranger.

Stevie,

My name is Ugo Okere and I am the Community Engagement Coordinator here at the Evanston City Clerk's Office.

Our office is committed broadly to civic engagement, with a special focus on youth participation. We would like to work more closely with you on two issues the Clerk's office has undertaken- elections and marijuana legalization.

If you are interested, we are available to meet anytime between 9AM to 5PM on Monday or Tuesday of next week- please let us know. We would gladly make the trip down to you or you can meet us at our office at 2100 Ridge Ave.

Best,
Ugo

Subject : Partnership with the Evanston City Clerk's Office

Stevie,

My name is Ugo Okere and I am the Community Engagement Coordinator here at the Evanston City Clerk's Office.

Our office is committed broadly to civic engagement, with a special focus on youth participation. We would like to work more closely with you on two issues the Clerk's office has undertaken- elections and marijuana legalization.

If you are interested, we are available to meet anytime between 9AM to 5PM on Monday or Tuesday of next week- please let us know. We would gladly make the trip down to you or you can meet us at our office at 2100 Ridge Ave.

Best,
Ugo

In California the marijuana legalization issues are being handled by our California Highway Patrol, in terms of regulating pot shops, licensing, things like that. Not sure what the impact has been locally but remember here in the U.S. marijuana is still considered a schedule 1 drug and is illegal on the Federal side.

Subject: [IACA] Cannabis legalization - trend tracking, workload assessment

Good day everyone,

I am an analyst with the Edmonton Police Service, located in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada and I am one of a group of people tasked with looking at the effects of legalization of Cannabis within our jurisdiction.
Specifically, we are looking to see who is doing what related to assessment of:

- changes in police workload (e.g. is there more cannabis related events now? Are we seeing a change in how much time is spent dealing with cannabis related events, pre and post legalization, etc.)
- changes in the types of charges and types of criminal events related to Cannabis or where Cannabis is found to be a part of a file.
- And anything else related.

Are there any specific metrics or methodologies you are applying in your assessment in your jurisdiction?

Are you seeing any trends within your jurisdiction in relation to Cannabis and legalization (or other drugs)?

Thank you for your assistance and sharing what your agency is doing in terms of assessment related to Cannabis or other drugs.

Thank you again.

Stevie,

My name is Ugo Okere and I am the Community Engagement Coordinator here at the Evanston City Clerk's Office.

Our office is committed broadly to civic engagement, with a special focus on youth participation. We would like to work more closely with you on two issues the Clerk's office has undertaken- elections and marijuana legalization.

If you are interested, we are available to meet anytime between 9AM to 5PM on Monday or Tuesday of next week- please let us know. We would gladly make the trip down to you or you can meet us at our office at 2100 Ridge Ave.

Best,
Ugo

Directors and Designees,

We have another survey. This one also asks two questions:

1. Should we support SB 1559—The Tenants' Radon Protection Act
2. Should we support HR 157—A resolution asking the General Assembly to slow down the process of recreational Marijuana legalization.

Directors and Designees,

We have the results of the latest survey monkey on HB 208 and HB 2724.

HB 208 provides that every school should provide instruction on the side effects and use of cannabis.

NIPHC has voted to MONITOR HB 208.

HB 2724 prohibits smoking in car with a minor present.

NIPHC has voted to SUPPORT HB 2724.

James, Bill and Sean are copied and should make sure we slip in support of HB 2724 for the hearing at 10 am this morning.

Thanks

Dennis

Report: State Governments Aren't Doing Enough to Fix Recruitment Woes

DAVE NYCZEPIR | The number of available state government jobs grew from 2013 to 2017, while applicants for those positions dropped.

Contractors and Advocacy Groups Push Back on State Efforts to Mandate Surveillance Software

MITCH HERCKIS | State legislation pushed by one company to require contractors to install the software would compromise data privacy and carry steep costs for companies and governments, the groups argue.

Americans Drove a Record Number of Miles Last Year

BILL LUCIA | That's 3.2 trillion miles on the road, based on new U.S. DOT estimates.

Report: State Governments Aren't Doing Enough to Fix Recruitment Woes

DAVE NYCZEPIR | The number of available state government jobs grew from 2013 to 2017, while applicants for those positions dropped.

Contractors and Advocacy Groups Push Back on State Efforts to Mandate Surveillance Software

MITCH HERCKIS | State legislation pushed by one company to require contractors to install the software would compromise data privacy and carry steep costs for companies and governments, the groups argue.

Americans Drove a Record Number of Miles Last Year

BILL LUCIA | That's 3.2 trillion miles on the road, based on new U.S. DOT estimates.

Report: State Governments Aren't Doing Enough to Fix Recruitment Woes

DAVE NYCZEPIR | The number of available state government jobs grew from 2013 to 2017, while applicants for those positions dropped.

Contractors and Advocacy Groups Push Back on State Efforts to Mandate Surveillance Software

MITCH HERCKIS | State legislation pushed by one company to require contractors to install the software would compromise data privacy and carry steep costs for companies and governments, the groups argue.

Americans Drove a Record Number of Miles Last Year

BILL LUCIA | That's 3.2 trillion miles on the road, based on new U.S. DOT estimates.

Subject : The $50 Marijuana Investment Jackpot

Dear Reader,

Like it or not, marijuana legalization is sweeping the country...

On Election Day, California, Nevada and Massachusetts all roundly voted to legalize recreational marijuana use.

And that means that very soon dozens of tiny marijuana firms could skyrocket by 100%, 300%, 500% or higher.

This is your chance to turn a single $50 bill... into an absolute fortune.

But you need to get in ASAP!

According to CNBC, "Now is the right time to bet big on marijuana... [as] the industry is poised to be gigantic."

And Forbes is touting that "hundreds of millions of dollars are pouring in..."

Click here for full details on how to stake your claim.

Aaron Gentzler
Publisher, Technology Profits Confidential

P.S. Already, some of the biggest and most successful names on Wall Street have acquired major positions in companies in the marijuana sector, investing millions...

I'm talking about PayPal creator Peter Thiel... Reddit CEO and founder Steve Huffman... legendary hedge fund manager Joel Greenblatt... and even Warren Buffett.

GA Bill Would Continue Ban on Forced Breathalyzer Tests – Legislators scrambled to fix Georgia's DUI law after the state's highest court ruled last month that refusing to take a breathalyzer test can't be used in court against motorists suspected of driving drunk, but a bill up for a final vote in the state Senate doesn't reinstate mandatory roadside breath tests. The legislation simply changes the language officers read after they pull drivers over so that it's consistent with the court's ruling.
